

GREEN & GREY

Volume LXI Number 3 October 5, 1987

GET THE NEWS STRAIGHT FROM THE GREEN & GREY

Loyola College Baltimore, Maryland 21210-2699

Cheating Increases Nationwide

Loyola and Notre Dame Differ in Discipline Policy

by Quita Remick
News Staff Reporter

"Both the faculty and the administration have decided that cheating is common at Loyola," said Fr. Joseph Sobierajski, Director of Advising.

Sen. Joseph Biden (D-Del.) may have been embarrassed by revelations that, as a student, in 1965, he cheated on a paper for law school, but cheating remains widespread on American campuses today, authorities say.

In fact, cheating has become readily seen in society. A Carnegie Commission report in 1985 revealed that thirty to fifty percent of all college students say they have cheated during their academic careers.

Richard Nixon, in the Watergate scandal, publicly admitted that his error was not in admitting his dishonesty, but in not getting rid of the tapes.

"We need to change both the students' and society's attitude about cheating; not that cheating is wrong, but that getting caught in an dishonest act is wrong," stated Sobierajski.

"Dishonesty is taking something that does not belong to you and taking credit for it. Cheating is measuring someone else's success, not your own," according to Sobierajski.

has asked for faculty cooperation in testing procedures and in evaluating essays. Scheye has called for thorough proctoring of exams and insists that professors change their exams instead of using the same one year after year. He has also called for a careful reading of all papers so that instructors are able to distinguish work that is not the student's.

Dr. David Dougherty of the English department states, "I don't give second chances on this issue. If I feel that this is not a student's own work, I will not hesitate to circulate the essay among my colleagues."

Dougherty believes this is the most serious issue because it destroys the fundamental relationship between tutor and student. Dishonesty undercuts all that the relationship is based on.

In his seventeen years at Loyola, Dougherty has also noticed that cheating has increased.

"I give very severe penalties to students who cheat," said Dougherty. "If they are caught cheating on a test, I will give an automatic zero which will result in failure in the course." Papers receive an automatic zero as well.

Dougherty says he also writes a letter to be put in the student's file explaining the student's academic dishonesty. "This puts the responsibility on the institution to be vigilant on academics," he said.

The College of Notre Dame, however, operates on a different system dealing with cheating. They do not have professors proctoring exams. Instead they operate on an honor system. The students must take a vow to do their own work and to turn in anyone whom they suspect of cheating from others.

Sister Stephanie Mary, assistant dean of students at CND, said that the school has operated under an honor system since 1937 and that the system has been quite successful at CND.

"We did not have any cases of cheating that went before the honors board last year," she said, "although we had several cases which were settled between the professor and the students individually."

Sister Stephanie said that usually the student receives a failure on the paper, but the instructor gives the student the opportunity to rewrite the paper. If the incident involves a test, she said the student gets a chance to admit her guilt and is given the option of retaking the exam.

CND's emphasis is on settling the problem vocally. Sister Stephanie says, "We try to discover the truth."

G & G Photo

Dr. Dougherty takes a hard line on cheating.

He added, "you should judge yourself by what you produce and have a realistic attitude towards what you can produce."

Sobierajski is a firm believer in the grading system, arguing that the grades give us a measuring device by which we measure our progress. The grade gives you an idea of how a student is grasping the material.

Sobierajski believes the direct cause of cheating is a student's emphasis on the future and in obtaining the "perfect" career. Students tend to believe their grade is most important, not the actual learning, he said.

Loyola's policy on cheating is, for a first offense the student receives a failing grade and an annotation kept in a separate file explaining the reason for failure. The student at this time may protest his or her position.

Upon a second offense, the student automatically is dismissed from Loyola without the right to appeal his or her case.

If a student has been found guilty of cheating plans on applying to professional schools, their recommendations from the instructors will reflect the cheating incident, although their academic transcript will not.

According to Sobierajski, the students caught cheating are not just those struggling to get by. "The people who cheat go across the board. We have had A students cheat. When I sit down and talk with them, they can't even offer an explanation."

There were numerous cheating cases last year, said Sobierajski. Only one case resulted in dismissal, because the offender had been caught twice. He also added that there were many cases where the instructor gave a failing grade. Sobierajski feels that, based on past cases, most students get caught cheating on exams.

Therefore, Provost Thomas Scheye

G & G Photo

Fr. Sobierajski says "the people who cheat go across the board."

The students will usually open up because they feel a sense of responsibility to be honest."

Dr. Dougherty said that the committee has discussed the possibility of a honor system at Loyola. He said, however, that he does not know much about honor systems because he has never worked under one.

"I believe a honor should be nurtured. An honor system systematizes instead of addresses the problem. It also imposes penalties. The honor system does not address the issue of dishonesty and does nothing about development of character," he said.

G & G Photo/Tom Paravani

The FIXX

The Fixx is one of the most popular entertainers that Loyola has had since Billy Joel. More than 800 students attended the concert in the Reitz Arena on Saturday night.

Varga Revives Loyola's History

by Jim Choplick
News Staff Reporter

Loyola College Professor Nicholas Varga recently completed work on his book that concerns the history of Loyola College from 1851-1986.

Varga, a member of the History Department since 1955 and the senior member of the regular faculty, spent four to five working years to prepare the manuscript for publication. The total running time for the book is currently at 20 years.

In writing the book, Varga says that he was mostly concerned with making the text readable and accurate. "The book is concerned with things that most histories of colleges don't deal with," he says.

The book, that in print will be approximately 600 pages long, is laid out in stages, each stage giving a sense of what the college was like at the time and its relation to the city.

While writing, Varga found that the book was best organized by the terms of Loyola's presidents. He sees, however, a basic college breakdown of three distinct periods.

From the founding of the institution, Loyola was a lot like similar small liberal arts colleges. It encompassed both high school and college levels, and tended to stress courses in Latin, ancient literature, and modern literature.

Around the time of World War I, Loyola's high school and college levels separated. By 1921, the college had features such as a football team, freshmen hazing, student council, and even the greyhound as its mascot. At that time, the college consisted of about 60 students. By World War II, there were 400 students attending Loyola.

The third stage began around 1964, when current president, Father Joseph Sellinger came on board. The joint library was established, dormitories were created, the budget and endowments grew tremendously, and, in 1971, Loyola went co-ed, merging with Mount St. Agnes.

Varga says that the book dedicates an entire chapter to Loyola's involvement in a Supreme Court case that concerned area private colleges receiving support from the state. The case lasted from the early '70s until June 1976, when, by a 5-4 vote, it was decided the state support of private colleges was perfectly legal.

The book also contains a chapter dedicated to student affairs and activities, which includes information about a secret fraternity that existed from the later 1940s through the '60s, and may still operate today.

Varga was born and raised in New Jersey, and entered Boston College in 1943. The military intervened with his studies, and Varga served in the 87th Infantry Division from 1943-47. He was awarded the bronze star medal and purple heart, when wounded the day after the Third Army crossed the Rhine.

Coming back to school, Varga earned his undergraduate degree from Boston College in 1951, and his masters from BC in 1952. From there he went to Fordham University for his Ph.D.

At Loyola, Varga has taught classes on American history. In 1976 he became the college archivist, a position that is responsible for "being the institution's memory, making sure records survive." Varga says that the position also requires him to field questions about Loyola's history.

His works have been published in the William and Mary Quarterly, Protestant Episcopal Historical Magazine, The New York Historical Magazine, and the Maryland Historical Magazine.

His book has been recommended by the publication committee of the Maryland Historical Society, and should be published by the beginning of next semester.

Pro-Lifer Says Abortion Is Big Business

by Laura Melia
News Staff Reporter

Pro-life advocate, Carol Everett, spoke to students, faculty, and community members Friday night at Loyola. Everett led the group on a "walk through an abortion clinic," where she told detailed stories of the abortion industry.

Everett had been involved in the abortion industry for six years in the Dallas/Fort Worth area of Texas, beginning in 1977. During this time she performed the duties of director, and eventually owner, of two abortion clinics. Everett said she was making in excess of $150,000 a year.

Everett said that her company subsidized Planned Parenthood. "One director wanted a gazebo in her office, so we built one," said Everett. "Then she wanted a Cadillac; we gave her one. When she retired, we took back her Cadillac. I was a lying, stealing, cheat-on-her-income-tax type of woman," said Everett.

Everett left the industry in 1983 after a series of incidents. She and the other two co-owners of the abortion clinics were having trouble with business decisions. They went to see a business counselor, who was also a priest. Everett began to question her role in the industry. "It was becoming harder to justify killing 500 babies a month," she said.

"At this point of desperation, I fell to my knees inside the clinic and said, 'Lord, if there is a God, hit me over the head with a two-by-four if you don't want me running an abortion clinic,'" she said.

The two-by-four came in the form of a wired newswoman from a local television station. The newswoman said she thought that she was pregnant. After a test, the clinic told her that she, in fact, was pregnant. The woman then went to another doctor who confirmed the true fact that she was not pregnant.

"This was my answer. I didn't know why, but I had the decency to walk out the door," said Everett.

Everett describes the abortion clinic as "Satan's stronghold on our society." She believes it is an industry based on deceit and the deception of others.

"I believe abortion needs to be stopped," said Everett. "It needs to be stopped from the inside out so there won't be anyone to go back in there and start it again."

During the lecture, Everett described the tactics she used to get women to come to the clinic for a pregnancy test. When they called, a counselor would talk with them and befriend them with a "let them think you are the one that can help them attitude," she said.

"They [the counselors] had incentives," she said. "They were abortion salesmen, and they wouldn't get paid if the abortion was not performed."

Once the woman was sold on the abortion, an appointment was made for her. She would go in the next time with the money and have a blood test to make sure she was pregnant. "It didn't make much difference, they're all pregnant one way or another," said Everett.

The women then signed a six to twelve page consent form designed to confuse her so that no questions would be asked. If questions were asked, they were usually, "Is it a baby?" where the counselor would answer, "No, it's a blunderbuss, a product of conception."

Or they ask, "Does it hurt?" in which the counselor would describe the pain as "A little cramp to open and a little cramp to close."

"They lied. It is excruciatingly painful," said Everett, who herself had an abortion. "I can't explain that part and have never been able to."

The girl then sits in a holding room and waits for the doctor. Before entering the room, the doctor takes a coupon from her chart and pockets it for a cash redemption at the end of the day.

After the abortion is done, the counselor gives in and pretends what Everett calls the "resale process."

"We are here if you have another problem, we'll take care of it," she said.

Everett said that many women have four to five abortions. The typical woman that seeks an abortion is about 24 years old, middle to upper-middle class, and in her second or third year of college.

Everett went on to give the gruesome details of abortions that became complicated. The lecture then turned into a rally where the Pro-Lifers agreed to picket, or "sidewalk counsel," at Hillcrest, an abortion clinic in Baltimore County.

Everett maintained that "picketing is the most effective thing to do... if nothing else, it puts a conscience in the doctor's mind and improves the quality of medical care. Picketing has to be done out of love, not anger," she added.

The lecture ended with a haunting note from Jack Ames, of the Catholic Defend Life, who said, "Rescue those being led to the slaughter," a reference made earlier in the evening to the Holocaust.

News

Parents' Weekend Draws Largest Attendance Ever

by Adrienne Sweeney
News Editor

Loyola College's Annual Parents' Weekend had the largest response in the history of the program, with attendance jumping from 542 participants last year to 1400 this year.

Parents' Weekend took place from September 25th through the 27th. According to Lynn McKaine, who coordinated this year's Parents' Weekend, the many additions to the program and greater publicity are two of the reasons for the larger attendance.

"This year we had much more publicity promoting the weekend," said McKaine. "We mailed post cards informing parents of the new activities scheduled six weeks prior to Parents' Weekend, and we sent newsletters two weeks later."

"Residence Life also included a schedule of events in their newsletter sent out to parents in August. And the Resident Assistants displayed posters promoting the Weekend on the check-in dates of all the dorms," she said.

A larger freshman class also attributed to the increase in attendance. However, McKaine said the addition of four new programs was one of the biggest contributions to the Weekend's success.

"Andrew White Night" which ran from 5 p.m. to midnight in the Andrew White Club was one of the new changes. Complimentary hors d'oeuvres and a free glass of wine for parents were offered, as well as dinner specials at discount prices.

Susan Schmitt, of the class of '89, provided musical entertainment from 6 p.m. until 11 p.m. Schmitt played piano and guitar, as well as sang.

Another addition to Parents' Weekend was the Loyola Mini-College. This featured Fr. Haig of the Physics Department, Dr. Carol Abromaitis, chairperson of the English Department, and Dr. Charles Scott of the Economics Department.

These four professors presented shortened versions of their lectures. This was designed to give parents a first-hand idea of the education their children are receiving at Loyola.

The Mini-College sessions began at 1 p.m. and continue until 2:30 p.m.

Dave Tartaglia, Senior Class President, coordinated a Senior Class Parents reception, which was held in McGuire Hall. The reception included hors d'oeuvres and drinks and ran from 8 p.m. until 9 p.m. Tickets were $4.50 per person.

Immediately following was a Parents' Weekend Celebration in the Reitz Arena. This was open to all students and parents, faculty and administration. "The Fresh" provided live entertainment. Tickets for this were $10.00 per family.

The Honors Convocation featured keynote speaker Rev. James Hennessy, S.J., who is rector of the Jesuit community of Canisius College.

The topic was "Loyola Heritage: Religious freedom and Academic Excellence." Two new awards were added to the program: The P. Edward Kaltenbach Classics Medal, which was established by Rene J. Gunning, Sr., in memory of the late P. Edward Kaltenbach, Professor of Classics and Dean of Freshmen at Loyola College from 1946-1984, and the Michele Regina Roan, Junior Education Achievement, dedicated for 1987 to the late Edward V. Daubner, in recognition of life-long service in the field of education.

The Honors Convocation took place at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday. McKaine said she has received a tremendous amount of positive response from those who attended the Weekend's activities.

"We included a response survey in the packets of information we sent out. Many have come in with positive and grateful responses," said McKaine.

As in the past, the scheduled activities included the Honors Convocation, the 12th Annual Loyola/Budweiser Soccer Tournament, the Legacy Reception for Alumni, the Twenty-second Annual Outdoor Invitational Art Exhibit, and a Mass of the Holy Spirit.

G. & G. Photo/Jamie L. Stasi

Attendance at the Annual Parents' Weekend more than doubled this year, said Lynn McKaine of the Public Relations Department and Coordinator of this year's activities. Attendance rose from 542 participants to 1400.

G. & G. File Photo

Dean Joseph Healy, moderator of Alpha Sigma Nu, said that the ASN members participate in a tutorial program in order to "share their academic talents."

Alpha Sigma Nu Is Selecting Members

by Mimi Teahan
Assistant News Editor

Alpha Sigma Nu, the national Jesuit honor society, is currently selecting up to eight new members for its Loyola chapter.

Alpha Sigma Nu is a national organization that recognizes students for academic performance, service, and loyalty. There are chapters in each of the 28 Jesuit colleges nationwide.

"One of the stipulations of the organization is that only 4 percent of the graduating class may be members," said Dean Healy, moderator of the club. "Loyola is therefore allowed to have up to 23 members in its chapter. There are currently 15."

The fifteen current members are responsible for evaluating eligible applicants for this fall's selection. Faculty members do not have a say in the process, Healy pointed out. However, Fr. Sellinger must approve all selected members.

The first stipulation for membership is that students must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.5. However, they must also demonstrate service activity to the Loyola community, or the community at large. Applicants fill out a sheet listing activities which they feel indicate a high degree of service.

The third stipulation for membership is that students must indicate their loyalty to Loyola College. Students do this by completing a brief essay on how they feel they have been loyal to Loyola. All of the applicants' information is then reviewed by the current ASN members.

Dean Healy pointed out that "Students get into ASN because of being active. ASN doesn't want to drag these students away from these activities and tie up their time."

However, ASN does require that its members participate in two primary services. The first of these is the tutoring program that ASN runs. ASN members serve as academic tutors as well as recruiting other students to provide tutorial work. "It is a chance for the ASN members to share their academic talent," Healy said.

The other obligation that ASN members have is to participate in selecting the distinguished undergraduate teacher of the year. Healy said that everyone in the Loyola community is allowed to nominate eligible faculty members. However, eight ASN members, the ASN president, and the ASLO president compile the nominations and then narrow it down to three candidates. Fr. Sellinger selects the teacher of the year from these three names.

ASN members are also active in assisting with minor services such as the alumni drive, and assisting other clubs with their activities.

"ASN is an honor and a recognition," Healy said. The club admits new members twice a year: in Spring of their junior year, and fall of their senior year.

Community Notes

EPA MEETING

The Evergreen Players' Association will hold its second meeting of the school year. Upcoming events, including audition and technical information, will be discussed. All old and new EPA members are welcome to attend. The meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 6 during activity period in the rehearsal room.

INQUIRY INTO CATHOLICISM: CAMPUS MINISTRIES INQUIRY GROUP

For those wishing to learn more about contemporary Catholicism, enrich their faith, or prepare for the sacraments of Baptism and/or Confirmation there is a meeting every Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Campus Ministries Lounge. All are welcome.

ALPHA PSI OMEGA: THE THEATRE HONORARY

Alpha Psi Omega is sponsoring a set construction workshop. Anyone interested in learning about basic technical work should attend the workshop, to be held Thursday, October 8 during activity period in the theatre.

ALCOHOL AND DRUG RECOVERY GROUP

A support group is being formed on campus for those interested in Alcohol and Drug Recovery. Information is available at the Counseling Center, Beatty Hall, Room 203 or call 532-5109.

BIBLE STUDY

Campus Ministries is forming a Bible Study group for those interested in discussing the Scriptures in an informal way to enhance their spiritual life. The group meets every Monday at 7 p.m. in the Campus Ministries Lounge.

ISRAEL STUDY TOUR

The Theology Department will sponsor a 9-day study tour of Israel from December 36, 1987 to January 3, 1988. College credit (both graduate and undergraduate) is available. For itinerary and information, contact Dr. Webster T. Patterson in the Theology Dept., ext. 2219.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

Isabel de Anda, a Paraguayan painter, will give a lecture slide show on her country, its art, and her own paintings. The talk will be held on Friday, October 9 at 4 p.m. in Jenkins Hall. All are welcome.

POWDER PUFF FOOTBALL

A women's intramural football tournament will highlight FUNDAY on Oct. 4. The games will be held on Curley Field.

PHYSICS CLUB MEETING

The monthly meeting of the Physics Club will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 6 at 12:15 p.m. in Donnelly Science Center, Room 204. Students will give short talks on their research projects and refreshments will be served.

JHU BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

The Johns Hopkins University Bridge Club will be hosting the North American Collegiate Bridge Championships on Tuesday, Nov. 10. Any partnership from the same school may participate. Information is available from Joe Ogulin, c/o JHU Bridge Club, or call 243-8654.

COMPUTER WORKSHOPS

Academic Computing Services will offer workshops on various software packages during activity period on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Registration will be taken in the IBM/PC lab in Maryland Hall. Call the PC lab at ext. 2612 for more information.

SAILING CLUB

Whether you first came from down under or just enjoy floating around in the creek, the sailing club is ready for you. Meetings are held every Thursday in MH 302 at 12:15. For more information contact Paul Dyer at 252-1483.

HISTORY DEPARTMENT COLLOQUIUM

The History Department will be sponsoring a lecture entitled "What and Why Is a 'Loyola College': A Historian's Exposition," October 7, at 4 p.m. in W112.

SENIOR PORTRAITS

Sign-ups for Senior Portraits will begin Tuesday, October 6, in the Student Activities Office. The dates for portraits are October 14-16 and 19-22. They will be held in Charleston Hall, 4548D. For more information, call Mike Beltran at 532-8214.

CARTOONIST AWARD

The Scripps Howard Foundation will honor outstanding college cartoonists by awarding a cartoonist working on a college newspaper or college magazine in the U.S. its Charles M. Schultz Award for Promising Cartoonists. The winner will also receive $2000. The deadline for entries is January 9, 1988.

CHANGE IN LIBRARY FINES

Effective September 1, 1987, the fines for overdue materials at the library will be:

Fines - 10¢ per day per item. Maximum fine - $10.00 per item. Grades and transcripts are held and library cards are not updated if library obligations are not met. Replacement cost of any lost library material will be charged - minimum charge is $12.00, plus fines of 10¢ for each day overdue up to a maximum of $10.00 per item. Failure to return a recalled book within 7 days - fine of $2.00 per day per item. Overnight reserves must be returned by 10:00 a.m. on the next day. Fines - $1.00 until noon, $2.00 after that, and for each subsequent day, per item.

Any organization interested in submitting a Community Note to the Green & Grey should do so in the envelope on the door of the Green & Grey office (Room 5 near Melanconi's) no later than the Wednesday before the week the Note needs to be printed.

"You're Tuned to WLCR, Radio 560 on the AM Dial"

by Adrienne Sweeney
News Editor

This year the Loyola College Radio Station, WLCR, has a new face and is reaching more students on campus than ever before.

Previously WLCR transmitted their programs only to the school cafeteria and Butler Hall. This year, said Mary Rdzinski, a Senior Communications major and General Manager of WLCR, the station has finally received enough funds to repair the transmitter that will broadcast the shows to Hammerman Hall as well.

Rdzinski said she hopes the station will eventually receive enough to be able to reach all the dorms on campus. For now, however, she said the station has a budget that enables them to operate but not enough for expansion.

Student participation is another aspect of the station that has greatly increased, said Rdzinski. WLCR has 70 disc jockeys, many of which volunteered at the Activities Fair, said Rdzinski.

The D.J.'s work hour and a half shifts once a week. WLCR transmits from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Rdzinski said that this year the station's format has undergone some slight changes, as well. "The shows during the prime times, such as lunch and dinner hours, are more centralized this year," she said. "And any requests we receive must be played if we have the song."

Although this is not a new policy to the station, it will be more strictly enforced this year, she said.

"Many of our D.J.'s bring their own albums to the station during their shifts," said Rdzinski. "We have only 600 albums, many of which are outdated; so much of what we play is from the D.J.'s."

The news program of WLCR is also expanding. "Last year the news fell into a glut," said Rdzinski. "This year we're trying to revive it." The news consists of two students who are trying to incorporate local, college and national news, as well as sports.

Rdzinski and her assistant manager, Jennifer Roth, are looking for input from the students on all aspects of the station. "We're always looking for new ideas," she said.

"We're planning fundraisers for the upcoming year to draw students' attention. WLCR sponsored the power sale at the beginning of the semester and we had great response. We're planning another for next semester. We're also hoping to have another dance this semester like we did last year. It was a big success. We hope to have more ideas in the future."

Classified Ads

Green & Grey classifieds - the biggest bargain on campus. You can have your message read by 3000 students and faculty for only $1.50. Stop by room 204 in Andrew White for more information.

$10 - $60 Weekly & up mailing circulars. Rush self-addressed stamped envelope. Dept. AN-76C EN 9401 Wilshire, Suite 170, Beverly Hills, CA 90212

Rental Sales: Ornament, House, at Harborview, week, full & part-time, sale, garage, excellent, water & flexible hours. Please call Jennifer or Rob at 347-6086.

Music Lovers: Baltimore Symphony Orchestra seeks part-time telemarketers to sell season subscriptions - morning and evening shifts available. Qualified leads provided. Experience preferred. Call 783-8970.

Child Care & Light Housekeeping: Loving, intelligent person to care for our 3 yr. old daughter in our Mt. Washington home - Tues/Thurs, 12:30 to 6:30 PM. $4 per hr. More hours starting December. Must have own transportation. Call 466-1377 evenings only.

Help Wanted: Earn up to $5,000 next school year managing on campus marketing programs for top national companies. Flexible part-time hours. Must be junior, senior, or grad student. Call Yasmin at 1-800-562-2121.

Help Wanted: Home-workers Wanted! 101' PAY! Call 121 24th Ave N.W., Suite 222 Norman, OK 73069

For Sale: 77 Ford Maverick 4 dr, 8 cyl, A/C, A/C, P/S, AM/FM, 20K mi since eng and trans rebuilt by mechanic. Inspected. $3200. Must See. Call 433-0084

Easy Money! I will pay $25 for your phone book. Call Lee Ramsey, Collect at 515-577-7237 After 6 PM

The Rental Community That's
2 Minutes to Loyola,
7 Minutes to The Inner Harbor,
8 Minutes to Towson,
Close to Cross Keys and Roland Park
And By Far The Best Deal In Town.

*Short Term
Leases
Accepted
*Student
Discounts

*Furnished Apartments
Available

So Easy To Come Home To

At the Intersection of Cold Spring Lane and JFX

Open Daily, 10 AM to 6 PM
Sunday, 12 Noon to 5 PM

Take JFX to Cold Spring Lane East.

Take first right, then right again on Old Cold Spring Lane to top of hill.

366-6668

Humanities Center Sponsors Dante Conference

by Mary Gray
News Staff Reporter

Loyola College will hold a three-day conference on October 9-11 focusing on the Italian poet Alighieri Dante and his celebrated work, "The Divine Comedy".

"Dante and the Tradition of Christian Culture" will offer participants a chance to learn more about Dante and his contributions to the Western world.

Last spring, Dr. Joseph Koterski S.J., Co-chairman of the conference, and Dr. Hona Klein of Loyola's Italian Department founded the Evergreen Dante Club. The club meets every Tuesday during Activity Period to read and discuss the poem "The Divine Comedy."

According to Dr. Koterski, the meetings usually consist of about 12 to 15 members of faculty, administration and students holding widely scattered disciplines and interests about works of Dante.

The poem itself is broken up into three parts, the Inferno (Hell), the Purgatorio (Purgatory), and the Paradiso (Heaven). Each semester the club concentrates on one of the parts, Koterski said. This semester they have been discussing the purgatorio.

The conference, a contemporary appreciation of Dante, will be an extension of the regular Tuesday meetings. A host of 12 nationally known historians, philosophers and specialists in religion from the U.S. and Canada are scheduled to speak.

"The first goal of the conference," said Koterski, "is to distinguish how Dante and religion are related, and also to ask the question of how religion and literature could affect culture today."

Among the speakers at the weekend's conference is Dr. William Quinn from the University of Arkansas. With his discussion, "Handing on the Tradition of a Religious Culture: Teaching Dante at a State University Today", Quinn will give the opportunity to show people with no religious background, what religion can mean in their lives. His talk is scheduled for 9 a.m. Sunday.

For those at the conference who are just being introduced to Dante, Dr. Christopher Kleinhenz will host a slide presentation. Koterski believes this visual aide is a very interesting way to look at the impact of art through the centuries.

Loyola's Dr. Koterski will also be a featured speaker scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Saturday. His talk will discuss the reform movement of the church from the 11th to the 13th centuries, the progress it made in spiritual reform and the great disillusionment of the people brought on by the Renaissance.

Dr. Koterski explains "The Divine Comedy" as Dante's journey that depicts Hell, Purgatory and Heaven. In each 'place' the Italian author finds imaginative ways to illustrate these mysterious 'otherworlds' of our religion.

All sessions of the conference will be held in Beatty 234 on campus, except for the slide presentation which will be located in McManus Theatre, 8 p.m. Saturday. Anyone wishing to participate in any of the discussions can do so free of charge.

The conference has received financial support in the way of grants from the Maryland Humanities Council and Loyola's Center for Humanities.

Research Center Offers Students Employment Opportunities

by Lauren Bach
News Staff Reporter

The Center for Social and Community Research has established an employment opportunity for Loyola students interested in interviewing potential subjects involved in the various studies conducted by the Center.

Interviewing is a way to give you "a broader view of people," said Mark Peyrot, Director of the Center.

"We have oriented it more towards the students," explained Peyrot.

The Research Center pays five dollars an hour to students needing no background skills to interview people for research studies. The hours are flexible, fitting the needs of the student's schedule.

Mark Peyrot, Director of the Center

Psychology majors may be interested in it for good career experience. "It does expand your intrapersonal skills," he said, something everyone can use in any type of job.

The Research Center has done various kinds of studies, many of which have been published nationally.

"We do many hot breaking issues that are timely," said Peyrot. Loyola's Research Center was the first, according to Peyrot, to do a political poll predicting the election of Maryland's first black mayor, Kurt Schmoke.

There was also a poll done that uncovered an American fear that the deficit would lead us into a depression. Soon after, a book was published on the same subject.

"We do almost anything you can think of," said Peyrot, including political, marketing, economic, social and business issues. Some law surveys have been used in high-impact court cases.

The studies have been published in Catholic Review, The Sun, Baltimore Magazine, and the Wall Street Journal.

Last March, WJZ-TV, on ABC's channel 13, held a press conference and interview with Peyrot to study the outcome on this Deficit/Fear of Depression Study.

Studies on Loyola are also done. The Research Center contacted alumni asking questions such as: what do they remember about their college days, and how involved are they with it now? They then asked students about their likes and ideas for change. In response came the "Year-of-the-Commuter."

"Personally, I find research fascinating, and it fits my own scholarly interest," said Peyrot.

Employment in research areas are also available, but some courses need to be taken before being able to successfully research for the Center.

Students use a phone bank off campus. There is space for 24 interviewers. A total of at least 50 are used for each study. It's open anytime for flexibility.

The job works on a direct hire basis. To apply, leave your name and number in Jenkins Room 25 with the secretary, Agatha Mangieri.

STUDENT DIRECTORY

Anyone who wishes to put his/her name, address and phone number in the 1987-88 Student Directory, should fill out a form in the Student Activities Office no later than Friday, October 9th.

Anyone interested in designing and drawing the cover for the Directory should contact the Student Activities Office.

Be a phone interviewer!

Sign up for your own time
Earn $5.00 an hour
Evenings and weekends available.

For more information, contact Dr. Mark Peyrot, Director of Center for Social and Community Research, at ext. 2849 or 2298. Or stop by Jenkins Hall Room 5.

RESEARCH PAPERS
16,278 to choose from—all subjects
Order Catalog Today with Visa/MC or COD
You Free 800-351-0222
Hot Line In Call: 213/477-8226
Or, rush $2.00 to: Research Assistance
11322 Idaho Ave. #206-SN, Los Angeles, CA 90025
Custom research also available—all levels

Enemies.

Constantly they face each other, the body and the scale. She has just binged and made herself throw up. Sometimes she takes laxatives. Sometimes she goes through periods of bingeing and periods of fasting. She's obsessed with food and thinness. She's a victim of bulimia.

In another house two more enemies face each other, a girl and her mirror. Though underweight, she sees herself as too fat. She thinks she's dying to lose weight. In truth, she's starving herself.

She's a victim of anorexia nervosa.

Bulimia and anorexia. They can cause permanent damage. They can kill.

But help is available... at Mercy Hospital. The Anorexia/Bulimia Treatment and Education Center (ABtec) has a specially trained staff to help with these disorders through a variety of services.

This includes an inpatient treatment program, and the ABtec Support Group, which provides an opportunity for open discussions of feelings, attitudes, and behaviors associated with anorexia and bulimia.

Let Mercy Hospital help you and your loved ones get back on the road to good health and self-esteem.

ABtec
The Anorexia/Bulimia Treatment & Education Center

Mercy Hospital Inc.
301 S. Paul Street
(at Pleasant St.)
Baltimore, Maryland 21202
Phone: 301-332-9500

MEETING TOPIC
Support Group
& Recovery —
A Personal Experience
Free October 10, 1987

HAPPY HOUR
4-8

GATOR'S
PIZZA PUB
5914 York Road at Belvedere
433-0114

HORS D'OEUVRES
5-7

- Deep Dish Pizza
- Thin Crust Pizza
- Homemade Soups
- Overstuffed Sandwiches
- Salad Bar
- Big Burgers
- Subs
- Stromboli

Sunday	Tim Camp (formerly of Oodcomp)
Monday	NFL Silver Bullet Night 1:00 (During the Game)
Tuesday	Tim Camp
Wednesday	Tim Camp
Thursday	DJ-Jack Fritz of Spins, Inc.
Friday	15% off all food with college I.D. (except specials & buffet)
Saturday & Sunday	Raw Oysters or Steamed Shrimp 25¢ each from 12-6 PM (during football games)

Marshall's
12 SOUTH CALVERT STREET 837-2233

THURSDAYS COLLEGE NITE 50¢ DRAFTS

FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS BEAT THE CLOCK ALL DRINKS 2 FOR 1
8pm - 11:30pm

THURSDAY DJ-SCOTT HENRY
FRIDAY DJ-BILL HEARN

EDITORIAL

EDITORIAL BOARD

Thomas Paravati
Editor-in-Chief

Lecanne M. Rash
Managing Editor

Roger Young
Business Manager

Triffon G. Alatzas
Associate Editor

Sandra Moser
Associate Editor

Lorena Blas
Associate Editor

Hit the Road Jack, and Don't Ya Come Back

Recent disciplinary actions have brought up many new as well as old questions within the Loyola College community. The new policy that Residence Life has come up with this year is a suspension from college housing for a weekend.

The college dorms are something the school must protect, but escorting someone out of their home for the weekend is something that needs legal clarification. Previously, Loyola used their attorneys to back up controversial policies like alcohol. In this situation, however, the college feels that legality is not relevant.

When the question was put to Residence Life, their reply was that the college has last say in measures involving the dorms because they belong to the college. One group of students was required to leave campus on Labor Day weekend, and had to rent a room at a local hotel. Is this a way for a College to treat its students?

"The college dorms are something the school must protect, but escorting someone out of their home for the weekend is something that needs legal clarification"

According to Residence Life, a College Board of Discipline has been set up consisting of faculty members and two students elected by the ASLC. The Board has no responsibilities as of yet, but the college is now trying to find out just what they can and cannot do. As of now, if a student is cited for disciplinary actions within the dorms, their only appeal is to the Dean of Residence Life, Dr. Susan Hickey. Hickey said that the ultimate decision of the disciplinary action lies with her. Students deserve more than this. The college should immediately look into the possibilities of the College Board of Discipline so that students have rights in this regard. An appeal process is important. Decisions should not rest with one office, but a panel which represents the students and administration. Loyola College needs this Board to work towards gaining respect from students. It is important to realize that respect cannot be demanded, rather it must be earned.

What Happened to Ollie?

Trif Alatzas

Can anyone honestly say that they didn't follow the "Ollie North" fad this summer? It was something that hit this country with the same impact as the U2 world tour. Even if you don't like U2 you still knew they were coming, right? There is an alternative to the way things were handled and one that would have made a lot of Americans happy.

Oliver North was a man who had absolutely no chance. Congress had him hanging from a noose. The President had no clue as to what he was going to do with the Lieutenant Colonel. The American society was just waiting for him to fry. That is why so many people must have watched him that first day he took the stand.

Oliver North walked in, dressed in his service uniform and decorated like a Christmas tree. His hair was short, his eyes resembled those of a puppy, and he looked as sincere as your Uncle Fred (of course in this case it's Uncle Ollie). Good ole Uncle Ollie, who hadn't told the truth since the whole mess began, started his testimony and promised to tell the Council, "the good, the bad, and the ugly." But we never really heard anything ugly because we weren't really listening. We were watching.

Members of Congress started thanking the man for being cooperative. The same man that gave them so much trouble to begin with. People bought Ollie North shirts, bumper stickers, boxer shorts, Ollie North dolls, and whatever else was available. The whole episode resembled the setting of Rocky III when Rocky trains in a plush gym and sells every paraphernalia possible. The difference was that in Rocky the people that bought all that material really looked foolish, and everyone sitting in the movie theatre knew that trouble was on its way. Rocky would lose.

But did Uncle Ollie lose? It does not seem so. The Reagan administration lost. When Uncle Ollie disappeared from the public spotlight, he was sitting high among the pain cards. Aid to the contras was up by 7 percent, and it even looked like Reagan would be able to use Uncle Ollie's popularity to get more funding from Congress.

At this point in time the "Great Communicator" fouled up his whole system of communicating.

If the President and his staff had really wanted to use Ollie to their advantage they should have set him up on the airwaves. There could have been a nationwide surge into the life and times of Ollie North. A week after Ollie left those hearings they should have had him on every night time spot they could get: Nightline with Koppel, Late Night with Letterman, Nightlife with David Brenner and of course he should have appeared with Carson. When that campaign was done, they could have moved to the morning shows with "Hi, I'm your Uncle Ollie from the National Security Council, Good Morning, America!" From there they should have had him on the Donahue Show when it visited the Soviet Union and for the grand finale set him up with the hottest personality next to Uncle Ollie himself, Oprah Winfrey. If the Muppet Show was still on the air they should have definitely had Ollie as a special guest.

But the Reagan administration didn't do this. They let Oliver North disappear into the woodwork. Support for the contras is right back to where it was before Uncle Ollie took the stand. Let's face it, as Ollie wasn't available to the public eye, he was forgotten.

Letters to the Editor

Time to Write

In the first edition of this year's Green & Grey, the biggest surprise was not the color photographs, nor the few typos (keep those hands on your shoulders, Capricorns, and remember it's = it is, its = 3rd person singular, neuter possessive pronoun), but it was in the staff column. Listed among the staff writers was, shock of shocks, my name. My initial reaction? "AUUUUGHHH! I have no time for that! How can I make contributions worthy of the G & G with my schedule?" (Let's not harbour ill opinions either of the newspaper or of my writing while contemplating this, please.)

Contemplation No. 1: This school is a very active society; there are constant changes in size, faculty, students, activities, and workloads as well as the regular faces, classes, and places. Something is bound to occur that will impel me to formulate an opinion. As I have the reputation of being such a loud-mouth with a pen, I will want to express my opinion to as large an audience as possible. This newspaper offers me, or any member of Loyola College, a forum for expression to a great, and maybe even interested, public.

Contemplation No. 2: How much time will it take to tap out a few hundred words for periodical publication? Heck, what I write is so opinion-based I don't need much time to put it on paper and to slip it into the envelope on the G & G door (though I probably should take more time to refine and instill coherence into any piece). Furthermore, if there were a topic which truly merited such concern, my sincere interest would either stem from intimate knowledge or compel me to research the subject before sounding off. Any topic worth writing about would be worth the time spent writing.

Contemplation No. 3: Writing is no drudgery (WR 113 aside). Usually the finished product dispels any trace of trial or tribulation from the creative process.

Contemplation No. 4: Anything published, even though it is only in a school newspaper, always elates my parents. (Maybe I even let loose a quick grin too.)

Last year, the muse of Op/Ed (aka Lorena) called me to write for the Green & Grey, and I made various attempts. The articles, despite a few errors, made me feel that I had really contributed something to the college. This year, the muse of Lucretius calls me, and I am unsure whether I can consistently contribute to the paper. So I call to you, you, the members of the Loyola community. I call and invite you to write in your comments and opinions. Air your complaints where they will receive notice. Use your local fourth estate to react and respond to your college experience.

Mary Alice McDermott

McDermott is a junior Classics major.

Free Loaders

Last year, Residence Life instituted a new policy which prohibited charging admission at parties on campus. This policy had reasonable support: none of the students have liquor licenses, and the admission fee was equivalent to a cover-charge for alcohol. The policy has, however, by no fault of Residence Life caused an unnecessary strain on those who comply, in the form of stolen beer.

For too many students at Loyola, wandering into a stranger's apartment for a party, taking advantage of the "no charging rule" and smuggling out beers is acceptable behavior. This, aside from being incredibly rude, puts extra burden on those who take the risk of providing weekend entertainment.

One would think that at a Jesuit college, this would not be a problem. It is, however, and makes Loyola an even tougher place to hold social gatherings.

The Residence Life policy has potential benefits: people who abstain from drinking are more likely to socialize, and parties become less of a business. In fact, the social structure becomes more like "the real world" - you throw parties for your friends, who in turn invite you to theirs. It should theoretically work out rather evenly in the end. Free loaders eventually are left out of the process. In college, however, where open parties are used to meet new people, it is difficult to account for all of the guests. Therefore, students must show more courtesy to fellow students to make the system work.

Roger A. Young
Gregory Miller

Young is a senior Accounting major.
Miller is a senior Computer Science major.

Student Newspaper

Andrew White Student Center
(301) 323-1010
Editorial Offices Room 5 - ext 2352/2282
Production Office Room U2 - ext 2867
Business/Advertising Office
Room 205 - ext 2867
Photography Room 6 ext 2352

BOARD OF PUBLISHERS

Professor Andrew Gliala
Dr. Ernest Cooke
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Thomas Paravati
BUSINESS MANAGER
Roger A. Young
ASLC PRESIDENT
Brian Annulis
ASLC VP STUDENT AFFAIRS
Jack McCarthy

ADVISORS

EDITORIAL ADVISOR
Professor Andrew Gliala
BUSINESS ADVISOR
Dr. Ernest Cooke

EDITORIAL BOARD

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Thomas Paravati
MANAGING EDITOR
Lecanne M. Rash
BUSINESS MANAGER
Roger A. Young
ASSOCIATE EDITORS
Triffon G. Alatzas
Lorena Blas
Sandra Moser

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

NEWS EDITOR
Adrienne Sweney
OPINION/EDITORIAL EDITOR
Celeste Holinski
BUSINESS EDITOR
Sean Sands
FEATURES EDITOR
Michelle Hughes
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR
Ann Marie Vindus
SPORTS EDITOR
Stacey Tiedge
PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR
James LoScazo
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITORS
Margaret A. Tedman
Cathy Gillett
ASSISTANT OP/ED EDITORS
John Forde
ASSISTANT BUSINESS EDITORS
Hovik T. Ford
Mark Kernan
ASSISTANT FEATURES EDITORS
Michelle Tracy
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITORS
Kevin Walls
Reginald Meneses
BUSINESS DEPARTMENT
BUSINESS MANAGER
Roger A. Young
ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Elena Gumbia
ASST ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
Betsy Lightner
CIRCULATION DIRECTOR
Tom Myers

PRODUCTION DEPARTMENT

GRAPHICS COORDINATOR
James M. Bandman
GRAPHICS PRODUCTION DIR.
Amy Allen
LAYOUT PRODUCTION DIR.
Suzanne Lawton
GRAPHICS STAFF
Shawn Biglin
Bill Eyring
Steve Rando
Gregg Wilhelm
COPY EDITOR
Tom Banjak
Greg Miller

The Green & Grey is published weekly during the school year by the students of Loyola College. The writing, layout, pictures, and format are the responsibility of the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the views of the administration, faculty, or students of the college unless specifically stated. Signed columns represent the opinion of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the editorial position of this newspaper.

All Letters To The Editor must be typed double-spaced and signed by the author. Letters To The Editor may be declined if found libelous, objectionable, or obscene. The Editor reserves the right to edit material for the Opinion page. Correspondence should be addressed to:

The Green & Grey
Andrew White Student Center
Loyola College
4501 North Charles Street
Baltimore, Maryland 21210-2699

Sure Casey told me he knew all along about the diversion of funds. Then he sprung from the bed, his head did a 360°, and he chanted something about the anti-christ. You had to be there, Ted.

Business

Mr. Melanson's goal is to see Loyola grow further and become recognized as one of the top colleges in the country. C & G File Photo

Business Leaders of Loyola

Part II

Melanson Shoulders More Responsibility

by Timothy Schaller
Business Staff Writer

Mr. Melanson came to Loyola College in 1970 to become the Vice President of Finance, and his position and responsibilities have grown just as the school has grown.

In the years preceding Mr. Melanson's arrival at Loyola, the school had a series of deficit balances in the budget. Under Father Sellinger, the school was moving in a direction of growth and diversification. After Mr. Melanson's first year at Loyola, the budget deficit was reduced by $90,000 from the original $440,000. In the next three years he reduced the deficit to zero. In those early years, Loyola's enrollment was approximately two thousand undergraduate and graduate students with a budget of $3.5 million. Today, enrollment is over four thousand and the budget has reached $40 million. With the expanded budget have also increased Mr. Melanson's responsibilities. He is now the Vice President of both Administration and Finance.

There are four general areas which Mr. Melanson oversees and controls. The first is the realm of administration which includes personnel, physical plant, off-campus sites, and food service to name a few. Some of Mr. Melanson's goals in these areas are to increase the growth of off-campus sites and to strive to have the best security possible. He credits those working in the service program for a difficult position in handling much of this work.

Another area Mr. Melanson must manage is Finance, the job which he first came to Loyola to do. This field includes the Business Office, Office of the Controller, Payroll, Resource Management, and the maintenance and cultivation of beneficial relationships with local and national financial institutions. This of late, has been the most pressing area for the college.

Besides the addition to Donnelly Science Center, the new Garden Apartments, and the refacing of Wynnewood Towers, the school still needs money to operate smoothly. In assessing the situation, Mr. Melanson stated, "The college is on a quest for quality. It is a long and arduous journey because all these sources that need to be provided are not always there."

To the endower, Mr. Melanson is quick to point out that "creative finan-children. "Most of the time they bring me joy, but I occasionally have to deal with a bad situation." In dealing with this, he wants the students to realize that he does see both sides of the story, but he asks for students to be "part of the solution and not part of the problem." Mr. Melanson honestly cares about the students and wants to do the best for them.

The Administration Data Processing Center is the other responsibility which Mr. Melanson bears. The pressure to perform. This is because Loyola has not become overly burdened with administrators. This is the way he likes it, but as the school grows and changes, he regrettably admits that some policies are going to change. Mr. Melanson stressed the fact that the administration like the college works to grow through new and innovative ideas.

When looking to the future, Mr. Melanson sees a bright one for Loyola. He is pleased with the direction in which Loyola is moving and in which Father Sellinger is taking it. "Quality is essential for Loyola's future, and the way to get there is to husband the resources with care and intelligent decisions." Mr. Melanson feels that the college has been very adept so far in using its resources. His goal is to see Loyola grow further and become recognized as one of the top colleges in the country, not just in the mid-Atlantic region.

In observing Mr. Melanson, one sees that he is the consummate professional. He has to be, as he is always in touch with administration, faculty, students, and prominent businessmen as well. An outside source described Mr. Melanson as one of the premier financiers in the state.

Assessing himself and Loyola, Mr. Melanson commented, "I am deeply committed to Catholic education. I believe in it, and I believe in Loyola College. It is important that we turn out good moral people who can develop into the leaders of our future." This is one of the reasons teaching has always been a part of his Loyola career. In his position, there is a tendency to be pulled away by the externals. Teaching, he admits, gives him a better chance to keep in touch with the students.

Loyola should be grateful to have such an enthusiastic administrator who finds tremendous satisfaction in both the college and its students. Through his charisma and dedicated staff, things have been accomplished to keep Loyola moving in the right direction.

ADPC services the entire institution with an integrated software system and provides computing support to the various campus offices for record keeping, information sharing and progress reporting through an integrated database and network of terminals and printers. Normal business functions of payroll, general ledger, and accounts receivable and payable are included in this support. Student records, such as grades and demographic information are maintained as well. The computer center's activities under Mr. Melanson's guidance are also a center of information to Residence Life, the health center, Student Development, and Physical Plant.

A student need only look at the campus to see the success of Mr. Melanson and the college. When asked about this success, he is reluctant to take much of the credit he deserves, but instead places it on what he calls "a tremendous staff." "The key to Loyola's success has been a well-trained, qualified, loyal and eager staff. We work together as a team and have been responsive to Loyola's changing needs." Melanson praises middle management who have heavy cing" has been the solution to this problem. The college has used all of the latest techniques, such as joint ventures with private firms, to move ahead. Funds received through a growing endowment and a tax-exempt $35.5 million bond have also carried much of the financial burden. Mr. Melanson is justly proud that even with all of these cash outlays Loyola's campus has kept up its high level of conditioning.

Another function Mr. Melanson oversees is Residence Life. As Loyola has been growing, its image as a commuter school has been fading. In discussing the students and their relationship with administration, Mr. Melanson commented, "Even though we are growing, I never want to lose sight of being personal. We, as the administration, have to manifest this in action, not just words."

He has implemented plans to try to involve the residents in creative activities which will allow them to participate in leadership and service functions on and off-campus. Another responsibility Mr. Melanson has under this department is that of discipline, which he likens to his

Eight accounting firms, and various government agencies. Of these companies, most are looking for full-time employment, though some are interested in part-time or summer interns. The schedule for first semester appears heavily weighted toward Accounting majors only because the accounting firms finish their hiring by January 1. About 150 companies are expected in the spring and there will be more opportunities for persons with other majors.

One of the goals of Career Planning and Placement concerning their recruitment program is to attract companies from outside of Maryland to interview on campus. This is becoming necessary due to the shifting demographics of the student body. In mid-November, AT&T will recruit at Loyola for their Northern New Jersey location. They will be interested in full-time as well as part-time and summer employment.

It is important for the student to realize that if a company of interest is not interviewing on campus, Career Planning and Placement stated, "If a certain company does not recruit on campus, we will help you find a person to contact." This is one reason why an individual appointment is a crucial step in the job-seeking process.

Another valuable tool that is offered by Career Planning and Placement is the Career Advisory System. It is comprised of alumni who are willing to serve as career advisors for their given field. The advisors serve as a resource that provides services ranging from being a guest speaker and providing contacts for internships and full-time employment, to what type of entry-level position to expect. With almost one thousand members, this program has been quite successful.

AT & T to Hold Information Night

by Sean Sands
Business Editor

On October 13 at 7:00 pm, AT & T will hold an information night in McGuire Hall. The purpose of this seminar is to better acquaint Loyola students with AT & T since its divestiture and to explain about full-time positions available at AT & T.

The person behind AT & T night is Joe Galarneau, a district manager in human resources at the AT & T office in Basking Ridge, N.J. Mr. Galarneau recognized the need to bring AT & T to Loyola at freshman orientation when parents were asked to be volunteers. Before divestiture, AT & T came to Loyola as part of C & P Telephone. Since divestiture AT & T has had to get to campuses on its own which has sometimes been a problem due to the loss of personnel. As a result, AT & T looks for volunteers from within the company to recruit at smaller schools such as Loyola.

According to Mr. Galarneau, AT & T's business of information, movement and management is a wide open field. "In my opinion there are excellent careers here, and I would not say that if I didn't believe it."

AT & T will be interviewing on campus for those within two semesters of graduation on November 18. Sign-ups for these job interviews will begin October 21, and positions are available to students of all majors with a 3.0 G.P.A. or above. Most of the hiring will be for the AT & T office in Basking Ridge, N.J. Mr. Galarneau will be conducting interviews, which he stresses are very objective. AT & T looks for certain characteristics of an applicant such as activities, work experience, and supervisory experience.

Those hired by AT & T will find a number of attractive opportunities. All employees are eligible for tuition reimbursement for MBA's if certain grade requirements are met. There are also internal and external education programs for high potential

"AT&T has recognized by chance that Loyola has a lot to offer. We are looking toward a partnership."

"AT & T has recognized by chance that Loyola has a lot to offer, and AT & T also has a lot to offer," according to Mr. Galarneau. "We are looking toward a partnership."

The focus of the October 13 information night will be on what AT & T has to offer. Topics to be discussed include the fundamental changes that have taken place since the breakup of AT & T and full-time positions available to graduates. But this does not rule out undergraduates. AT & T is also looking for summer interns and this will be discussed as well.

managers. For example, AT & T hires professors from major universities to teach management in executive development programs how, as a manager, AT & T strategy affects them. Mr. Galarneau stresses that, despite its large size, working for AT & T is like working for a smaller company since it is divided into smaller business units. But AT & T at the same time offers advantages that a small company cannot such as the ability to move around within the company. Mr. Galarneau has worked in a number of different departments

Mr. Galarneau is the organizer of AT&T's Information Night.

Mr. Galarneau will run the information night, and he wants to give the students a feel for what it is like to work for AT & T. Representatives from accounting/finance, data processing, sales, and international/marketing will be present to give a description of their jobs at AT & T on a day-to-day basis.

and sees this as an exciting aspect of working for AT & T.

Those who wish to attend AT & T information night should sign up at the Career Planning and Placement Office located in Beatty 220. The event is scheduled to last two hours, and refreshments will be provided afterwards.

Student Loan Default Rate Increases

Washington, D.C. (CPS) -- Despite an aggressive campaign to track down people who aren't repaying their student loans, the federal government will have to pay off $1.5 billion worth of defaulted Guaranteed Student Loans during the 1988 fiscal year, the Office of Management and Budget estimated August 27.

The amount represents a 25 percent increase over the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

The payoffs -- made to the banks that actually lent the money to the students -- typically happen when the banks are unable to collect the money.

U.S. Dept. of Education officials note the $1.5 billion they're paying off in bad loans consumes more than half its $2.8 billion loan program budget.

The problem, said department spokes woman Victoria Tripp, is that defaulters think "the federal government is an easy touch."

But Mary Preston of the United States Student Association said "that's a pretty simple analysis."

Economic hardships, poor student financial counseling and rigid loan procedures force some borrowers to default on their student loans, Preston said.

"There are definitely abuses, but a lot of people are having a lot of trouble paying back loans," Preston said. "The government needs to work with them." "We've tried in every way we can," Tripp replied.

The government, she said, recently instituted an income-contingent program that reorganizes loan payments based on a borrower's income. Borrowers with certain low-paying careers, such as teachers in poor regions, will have their debts "forgiven" if they qualify.

The program, however, currently is only in a pilot stage, and prospective problems with it kept the vast majority of campuses from applying to join the pilot program.

To recoup some of its losses, Tripp said Washington will try "to send the signal that the federal government is no longer an easy touch."

The Internal Revenue Service still is withholding tax refunds from defaulters, a move that's netted more than $135 million in '85 and '86, Tripp said.

The Education Dept. also is employing collection agencies "aggressively," trying student loan defaults to borrow credit ratings and passing collection costs on to defaulters.

Defaulters employed by the federal government also have their salaries garnished, Tripp said.

On-Campus Recruitment Offered at Loyola

by Shawn Biglin
Business Staff Writer

The On-Campus Recruitment Program provides Loyola College students with the opportunity to interview on campus when they are within two semesters of graduation. This feature of Career Planning and Placement may not be unique as compared to other colleges, but its effectiveness has proven itself over the years.

Last year over 250 companies chose to interview at Loyola. Some of the companies included AT&T, Maryland National Bank, the "Big

Features

Photo Special to G & G

ROTC cadets acquire many military skills in the training program.

ROTC Leads the Way

by Jennifer Ternay
Features Staff Writer

"To commission future leaders of the United States Army" is the main objective of the Army Reserve Officers Training Corp., according to Lieutenant Colonel Paul C. Mellen. As the officer in charge, Mellen is responsible for the "Greyhound Battalion" which is comprised of students enrolled in the ROTC program from Loyola, Towson, UMBC, and Notre Dame.

The ROTC program provides some basic commodities as well as guaranteed employment with a starting salary of $22,000 a year, equal pay, and opportunities for advancement and travel after graduation. The army issues all military equipment good academic and ROTC standing, be interviewed by a board of officers and cadets, and pass a physical aptitude test. The physical aptitude test consists of a timed 300 meter shuttle run, a minimum number of flex-arm

2-5 miles. The Leadership labs are held outside, weather permitting.

Field training exercises (FTX) are also mandatory for all cadets. Three weekends each semester, the battalion participates in a FTX. The main ob-

"The Rangers tend to be a tighter knit group. Because it is smaller, there is almost a family atmosphere."

-Cadet Captain
Mike Lilley

jects for females or pull-ups for males, a basketball throw, and a stanjective of the FTX is to "provide a situation for leadership assessment,

G & G Photo/Jamie LaSalle

As part of the ROTC program, cadets must participate in physical training.

and books for military science classes to all students enrolled in the Reserve Officer Training Corp. All juniors, seniors, and scholarship students are ding broad jump. Presently, 36 students are on scholarships.

To remain in the ROTC program, the cadets must attend military science primarily of juniors. By simulating combat conditions and presenting a series of problems, each leader's ability to supervise, and his/her problem solving capabilities are evaluated. While the main objective of the FTX is leadership assessment, military skills are also stressed. The senior cadets teach survival techniques, small unit tactics, and rifle marksmanship as well as other skills to the rest of the battalion.

Those students who enroll late in the ROTC program must attend Basic Camp. Basic Camp is a six week program at Fort Knox, Kentucky. The program encompasses all the military science classes of the first two years of the ROTC program and provides physical training. All supplies, travel expenses, and room and board are paid a stipend of $100 a month. The program offers scholarships on a two to four year basis. A scholarship covers the cost of tuition and all fees and provides $195 for books and spending money of $100 each month.

To qualify for scholarships, the applicant must be medically fit, be in classes, leadership labs, physical training, and field training exercises. Physical training (P.T.) follows either class or lab. P.T. is held twice a week in the first semester and three times a week in the spring semester. The training session is mainly stretches, progressive calisthenics, and running

Valdes Climbing to Top

by Michelle Hughes
Features Editor

Mark Valdes, a 1987 Loyola graduate, is very busy these days preparing a career in the Entertainment business. Although he is uncertain of what the future holds, Valdes seems very hopeful and excited about his career.

For the past few months he has been travelling up and down the East coast, singing at a number of pageants such as the Miss U.S.A. Pageant and the Miss Teen U.S.A. Pageant on the state level, doing some commercial modelling, and making a name for himself. He has also been travelling to New York where he has been preparing a portfolio and meeting with several agents and casting people.

Although Valdes is satisfied with the work that he has been doing, he wishes to become involved in other facets of the entertainment industry. "I'd like to do something more than pageants... but I don't want it to seem like I'm knocking the work I've been doing. It has been good for me," Valdes explains. But Valdes is very interested in music and acting also. "I'd like to break into the recording end of things," he says, "or possibly television, like commercials or maybe soaps." However he expresses some resignation about acting in soaps and explains, "I don't want to get stuck."

Valdes has always been interested in entertainment. "Music has always been part of my life," he comments. Raised in Cumberland, Maryland, he is part of a very musically oriented family. "I guess I get my musical talent from my father's side of the family," Valdes explains. His father, Dr. Americo Valdes, is originally from the Dominican Republic and Valdes believes it is his family's Spanish heritage that made music such an important part of his life. "I remember when I was younger and the family would come over for the holidays. My older brother had a guitar and he would play for us. The entire family would sit around and sing. Music is part of my heritage."

In high school, Valdes was not involved in any type of singing or acting, although he was quickly becoming more interested in entertainment. It was at this time that the company, The Young Americans, came to Baltimore. This non-profit company tours the country performing such shows as Jesus Christ Superstar and

G & G Photo/Phil Rink

Mark Valdes is a Loyola graduate.

Showboat. They were looking for talented, young people who were interested in a career in entertainment and although Valdes did not audition for the company, he was selected through a tape.

He then traveled to Michigan where he did some acting and later spent a few months in California. He decided, however, to leave the company and pursue another path. "I was 18 years old and wanted to go to school, but working with the company and touring the United States was full-time," comments Valdes. "It was a good experience in that I met a lot of different people and saw the business side of the Entertainment industry."

Valdes attended Loyola where he majored in Biology and photography. "Biology was my strongest point in high school and I always liked photography. Working in photography made me interested in fashion." He also adds, "I don't regret getting my degree; I can always fall back on it." Valdes did several photography internships for such people as Gary Igarsi, who is involved in top fashion and commercial work, and Simpson and Flint. "I worked basically as a photography assistant in my internships but I picked up a lot of tips. I got to see things behind the scene and eventually I got involved in commercial modelling." Valdes then began to travel to New York where he prepared a portfolio and got in touch with Central Casting and obtained some work doing commercial modelling. "In a small town like Baltimore there is not too much work, so I decided to use New York as my avenue," says Valdes.

Later returning to Baltimore, Valdes contacted Sid Sussman of Silver Spring, Maryland and began to perform at pageants. Valdes has performed in Houston, Norfolk, Miami and has met such celebrities as Bob Hope. This winter he will be performing at Casa de Campo in the Dominican Republic with Debby Whorley, who sings at many of Bob Hope's shows. "It's one of those rich and famous resorts," comments Valdes, "A lot of celebrities go there like Michael Douglas. I'll be performing around Christmas time for that is the tourist season."

Valdes also hopes to sing and model at a show by fashion designer Oscar de la Renta in the near future.

Valdes is now in the process of picking an agent. "I decided that I have to put together a press package. Half the battle is to get an interview but I am very happy for a lot of people think I have talent and I am hoping to sign soon. Hopefully I'll make the right decision in picking an agent. It's all meeting the right people, that's any performer's path into the industry. The casting people are the people that make the difference," comments Valdes.

What does this family think of his work? Valdes says, "My family is very receptive. My father, being a doctor, always wanted me to go into something else. They are glad seeing me do something like this because they think I have talent."

As for what the future holds, Valdes is excited. He comments, "A lot of things might develop. If in four to five years nothing has happened I'll let it dwindle down to a hobby. I can always fall back on my major and go into pharmacy or medicine, but I'm not even thinking about that at this time. Things feel right inside, but you never know."

Laser Tag at Fort Bragg

by Kathy Shanley
Features Staff Writer

So, how did you spend your summer vacation?

Would you think I was crazy if I told you I spent six weeks of it in the middle of Ft. Bragg, N.C. with 4,000 other East Coast college students, in World War II - style barracks? Would you also believe

Bragg -- played war in the woods, threw live grenades, fired howitzers and machine guns, and watched a demonstration of virtually every Army weapons system (I'm glad we're on their side!). We did un-military things, too -- rappelling, swimming, helicopter rides, and we even had time (We made time!) to catch a beer (or two...) at the cadet lounge some nights.

... every morning we woke up between 4-5 a.m., got to sleep around 10 p.m. and we had to have shiny boots (and a sense of humor.)

that every morning we woke up between 4-5 a.m., got to sleep around 10 p.m. and we had to have shiny boots (and a sense of humor)?

Do you think I'm crazy now? Well, maybe you could say that, but I'm in good company -- talk to the 20 or so Loyola seniors in the ROTC program -- we're relatively sane, by college standards...

A summer at Ft. Bragg means that we were evaluated as future Army officers -- we had to prove that we're leaders, and, as I saw it, we had to grow up and realize how interdependent all humans are. I met all kinds of people down there: people our age whom I'd trust with my very life and a few, I admit, whom I wouldn't follow around the block. They all want to "serve our country," though, and living with 4,000 college kids dedicated to that goal was an incredible, exhilarating experience. I can't believe now that I was questioning my "life with ROTC" even up to last May...

Basically, we "did" everything at

Sure, it isn't for everyone, and maybe some people assume that they can't do the military thing and have it all at the same time, but think of this: Wall Street exists not on commodities alone. An active military force DOES defend this country of ours, and unless responsible, intelligent, and educated people dedicate some time to lead it, no one is safe -- just think about it.

Anyway, here's a strange episode of my "Bragg summer" --

Imagine the scene: a nine person squad of cadets out in the woods -- I'm in charge. We have to sneak up to an enemy outpost (two real soldiers dressed as Soviets) and gather "intelligence." As we near the site, our group stops and gets in a defensive circle, bodies flat to the ground, M-16s (with lasers attached) at the ready, and four of us go on a leaves recon -- we crawl up to the small outpost, quietly scraping the dirt.

Suddenly, a sneeze (I could kill

G & G Photo/Jamie LaSalle

Senior Kathy Shanley, a member of Loyola's ROTC program, spent the summer at Fort Bragg.

Bob!) -- hat it's too late, the enemy sights him, hacks onto his laser-sensitive helmet, and fires -- he begins to heep, and I can hear other helmets around me in the woods, one by one beginning to heep...

We're wiped out. I groan inwardly, (so much for intelligence!) and crawl up to Bob, to let him know just how much I appreciate his bay lever. He mumbles something softly, I strain to hear him -- "Budweiser! A cold Bud before I die!" I laugh uncontrollably, as my helmet starts to heep...

I perished this summer in "The Battle of Bob's Bud..."

While the main objective of the FTX is leadership assessment, military skills are also stressed.

is almost a family atmosphere -- we stand up for each other," emphasized Cadet Captain Mike Lilley. To be a Ranger, a cadet must have at least a 2.4 average. Since they have physical training every day, the Rangers spend more time with ROTC activities. Presently, the company is preparing for the annual Ranger Challenge. The Rangers will compete in seven events with 21 other schools in the region.

Air Assault School, Airborne, and Cadet Troop Leadership Training are optional summer camps. At Air Assault School, cadets are in assault tactics and repelling from helicopters. Airborne is paratrooper training. In Cadet Troop Leadership Training (CTLT), the cadet becomes the platoon leader of an active duty army unit. For three to five weeks, the cadet is responsible for every aspect of the lives of the 40-50 people in the platoon. Last year, out of the eight cadets who participated in CTLT, one was stationed in Europe.

Features

THROUGH THE LENS

James M. Bartolomeo

NEED CASH? WE DELIVER

Domino's Pizza, the world's largest pizza delivery company, is now hiring delivery drivers. If you are 18 years old, have a valid driver's license, automobile insurance, a good driving record, and access to a car, you can:

- Make an average of $7-$10 an hour.
- Enjoy the freedom of being on the road.
- Work flexible hours.
- Be part of the excitement of the world's fastest-growing pizza delivery company.

To apply, stop in your local Domino's Pizza store today or call 1-338-2500.

©1986 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

Catch the Spirit

New Orleans • Dallas • Atlanta • Baltimore • Jacksonville • Baton Rouge

Presents

COLLEGE NIGHT

Every Tuesday Night

Live Music - The Bash
(The Old Crash Davenport)

$1.00 Jaegermeister Shots
$2.00 22 Ounce Drafts

34 Market Place
Baltimore, MD 21202
727-4822

Located in the Brokerage
Corner of Water St. and Market

A Progress Report from Kids with Epilepsy

If you still think epilepsy has to stand in the way of a normal, active childhood, take a look at these kids. They're enjoying life to the fullest. While having epilepsy can still present serious problems, more and more children today are achieving long-term seizure control.

These kids prove it. Thanks to medical progress—and understanding from others—they're doing just great!

Find out where we are today in the fight against childhood epilepsy. You may be surprised at how much has changed. Write Epilepsy Foundation of America or contact your local EFA affiliate.

 Epilepsy Foundation of America

Write Epilepsy Foundation of America
P.O. Box 1573, Washington, D.C. 20013

I want to learn more about progress against childhood epilepsy

Name _____

Address _____

City, State, Zip _____

This space donated by publisher

Rage Page!

BLOOM COUNTY

BY BERKE BREATHED

STARDUST 7395.7... CHIEF ENGINEER SCOTT SUBSTITUTING FOR CAPTAIN KICK WHO IS RECOVERING AFTER HIS THIRD FACE LIFT. MR. SPOCK IS ON PATROL IN THE SHUTTLECRAFT...

SPOCK? COME IN SPOCK... ARE YOU THERE, SPONGE BRAIN?

AFFIRMATIVE MR. SULL. AND I'M FEELING A LITTLE GIDDY TODAY. I BELIEVE I SHALL STEP OUT THIS AFTERNOON.

STEP OUT? STEP OUT? WHAT'S THIS STEP OUT?

SPOCK... COME IN SPOCK... LAST TRANSMISSION APPARENTLY GARBLED

SULL. SOMETIMES WE ALL NEED TO JUST STOP AND... STEP OUT OF THE RIGID MOLDS WE'VE ALL MADE FOR OURSELVES...

FACT I FEEL LIKE DANCING IN SOME CAISIES RIGHT NOW!

SPOCK'S ON DRUGS. BLAST HIM WITH THE PHASERS

SPOCK? THAT'S NEGATORY ON 'DAISY DANCING'. YOU ARE OUT, REPEAT. OUT OF CHARACTER... DO YOU READ ME? SPOCK?

I BET LEONARD NIMOY DOES THIS ALL THE TIME!!

HE PROBABLY JUST HAS A BEER

The Serf Report

In the words of the legendary Mr. Hands, "Aloha!" Welcome to Fall. The season of changing leaves, cool crisp days, and NFL strikes. And an NFL strike means no Sunday drink specials at your favorite watering hole. So who cares if they are scab players, just bring back our drink specials. 'Thank you!'

In celebrating the new school year, the ASLC endowed resident students with bags filled with free promo items. Now the cup and the message board were ideal, but yo-yo's? C'mon, are they trying to tell us something? Well 2 out of 3 ain't bad, but skip the yo-yo's next time and save some money, all right fellas?

From the DID YOU NOTICE? department: Did you notice that last year was the "Year of the Commuter" (don't ask what this year is, cause nobody knows) and that the commuter has become even rarer this year. According to reports, Loyola has a 2,750 student cap.

Now subtract the soon to be reached resident student cap of 2050 and that leaves room for 700 commuters. There was a time when commuters were the strong majority. Now they may (and again they may not) feel like lepers-left out.

Warning: The Serf has been warned by Mr. Editor-in-Chief to write something "newsworthy" and to stop printing mumbo-jumbo. But then again why should the Serf write something no one will read? Good question! As Confucius always said, "Good dirt, produces good harvest." Think about it!

BARS, BARS, BARS: (No, it's not the title of an Elvis movie) If you are looking for some new places to get sloshed in or just to have a plain ole good time, Baltimore's Harbor has a few new spots to try. Fat Tuesday's is a chain bar with pre-made drinks that spew out of slurpee looking machines. It may be worth a try, but word has it there are better places to waste money in.

The avid sports-a-holic will love Baltimore's Original Sports Bar located above Bennigan's. With a half-court basketball cage, an arcade, pool tables, TV's everywhere you turn, and a boxing ring for a dance floor, there is surely something one can do besides drink. And if the above two fail you, there is always Chi-Chi's a stone's throw away. So take out a $100 student loan and go bar-hopping soon.

The beloved wizard of Webster's is back with some demented six words that may or may not make sense, but to be or not to be is truly his question. Nick' Six Sense.

THERE IS NO JUSTICE, JUST US!

Before closing with this week's top five, the Serf would like to ask Loyola's Housing administrators a question: shouldn't they be more concerned about students on-campus than off-campus? Because frankly they should have no jurisdiction over non-resident students. Perhaps if they allowed students to organize on-campus, beer-parties, students wouldn't feel the need to go to off-campus housing to have a drink with their friends.

Reasons Not to Believe Ollie North:

1. He looks too honest to be in Washington
2. His haircut
3. He wears the same clothes every day
4. He whispers to strange men
5. He doesn't whisper to Fawn Hall

Remember, three out of four dentists recommend that you don't chew The Serf Report because it does not prevent cavities. However, you can blow your nose with it. That's okay. Until next week fellow peasants.....

The Serf

Well LOYOLA, You ASKED for it...

"NIGHT OF THE DEAD CAMPS"

MUFFY! AM AND WARN THE OTHERS!
It's 9... 9...

PARTY!!

Bill Evans

"JUST KEEP SAYING: IT'S ONLY A Jesuit College, IT'S ONLY A JESUIT COLLEGE!"

B.M.O.C.

(By Matt On Campus)

I GUESS, EVEN WITH A MASSIVE HANGOVER, IT'S MY DUTY AS A CARTOON CHARACTER TO ENTERTAIN YOU...

WHOOPEE.

How WAS THAT?

Weekly Crossword Puzzle

3	2	3	9	3	3	7	3	3	11
14			12			13				14
15			16			17				18
	19	20	21			22	23
24		25	26			27	28
29		30	31			32	33
	34		35			36	37
38	39	40				41	42		43	44
15	46	47				48	49
50		51	52			53	54
55		56	57			58	59	60
61	62					63		64
	65					66		67

DOWN

1 Devoured
2 Fragments of rock
3 Faeroe Islands whirlwind
4 Out of maat; pl.
5 Growing out of 6 Toller
7 Gentle stroke
8 Encourage
9 Negative prefix
10 Wanted
12 Hebrew letter
14 Cubic meter
17 Scolds
20 Goals
23 Exits
24 Written order; abbr.
25 Athletic group

27 Astarisk
30 Disturbance
32 Dry
35 Nolslast
37 Short jacket
38 Showy flower
39 Musical instrument
41 Jog
43 Esculant
44 Therafora
46 Old pronoun
48 Glivas tood to
51 Twirl
53 Wintar
57 Female ruff
58 Fulfill
60 Still
62 French article
64 Physician; abbr.

ACROSS

1 Time gone by
4 That man
6 Country of Europe
11 Surgical saw
13 Articles of furniture
15 Babylonian deity
16 Issue forth
18 Latin conjunction
19 Brother of Odin
21 Antiered animal
22 Current
24 Twisted
26 Urges on
28 Weight of India
29 Church official
31 Bristle
33 Prelux; down
34 Go by water
36 Unusual
38 Equally
40 Debatable
42 Ceremonies
45 Secret agent
47 Sod
49 Extinct flightless bird
50 Cravats
52 Performs
54 Symbol for nickel
55 Printer's measure
56 Sham
59 Not later than 61 Depends on
63 Aimless scribbles
65 Doctrina
66 Compass-point
67 Soak, as flax

A Touch of Grey

THE SCENE: OUR HERO LIES RECOVERING ON THE COUCH: A VICTIM OF GRAB PUNCH AT LAST NIGHT'S TONGA PARTY

HEY HO?

HEY! WHERE'S WONDER-MUT? TODAY IS THE SEMI-SEMESTRAL JAM JIMMY BUFFET MUSIC, WEAR LOUD HAWAIIAN SHIRTS, AND SLAM MARGARITAS PARTY?

OR DID YOU FORGET?

HE'S DOWN AT HAMMERMAN CHECKING OUT THE FRESHMAN GIRLS MOVE IN

OH NO, IS THAT TODAY?

OH! AND THE JUDGES' SCORES ARE UP...

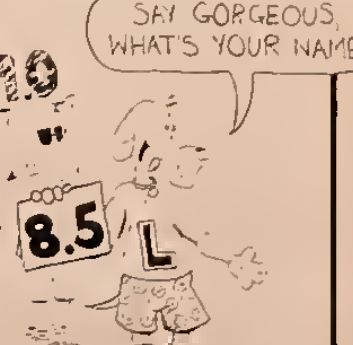

SAY GORGEOUS, WHAT'S YOUR NAME?

Entertainment

Broadway Bound: Teddy & Alice

by Dana Schmidt
and Niki Vourlos
Entertainment Staff Writers

Last week, Baltimore premiered an arousing new musical, Teddy and Alice. The play at Baltimore's Morris A. Mechanic Theatre began a four-week pte-Broadway engagement on Tuesday September 29th, 1987. The new All-American musical centers around one of our most compelling presidents, Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt, and his charismatic daughter, Alice. The two-act play, provides light humor, drama, and romance to the story of their relationship.

The music of John Philip Sousa provides a rousing backdrop to the story set shortly after the turn of the century. The acoustics of the Mechanic serve only to compliment the exciting orchestration. Director John Driver, whose New York credits include the Tony-nominated Shakespeare's Cobart joining him is award-winning choreographer, Donald Sadler, whose Broadway credits include "No No, Nanette," The skill of Sadler is evidenced in the wrong dancer numbers.

Theodore Roosevelt is portrayed by Len Carion, the Tony-award winner for his title role in Steven Sondheim's "Sweeney Todd". The dazzling role of Alice, one of the most exciting for musicals in recent years, introduces Nancy Hume. Other performances include Ron Raines as Nicholas Longworth and Beth Fowler as Edith Roosevelt.

We found one of the most exciting aspects of the play to be the brilliant set and costume design. Set designer Robin Wagner, costume designer, Theoni V. Aldredge, and lighting designer, Tharon Musser, comprise Broadway's most-awarded design teams. Their collaborations include "42nd Street" and "A Chorus Line". Musical director Donald Pippin, who also served in "42nd Street" and "A Chorus Line", joins them.

Overall, the play is an enjoyable and exciting musical. We found it both aesthetically pleasing to the eye, as well as pleasing to the ear, with its catchy and melodic tunes. "Teddy and Alice" is both educational and entertaining, a definite thumbs up from your devout Green & Grey entertainment critics. Performances are Tuesday and Saturday evenings at eight o'clock, Wednesday and Saturday matinees at two o'clock, and Sunday matinees at three p.m. Tickets are available in person at the Mechanic ticket office, Hopkins Plaza or may be charged by calling Telecharge at 301-625-1400. For additional information about the play, also call 625-1400. And we'll see you at the theatre!!!!!!

Photo Courtesy of Mechanic Theatre

Green & Grey Gourmet

Peter Boneross

Confucious Says . . .

Now, let's get down to the real specialties of this restaurant, the entrees. For shrimp and pork lovers there is the Sautéed Double Flavors, which is a dish encompassing both pork and shrimp, mixed with Chinese vegetables and in a spicy garlic sauce, that really is not too spicy unless you order it that way. For those who prefer chicken, try the Ta-Chien Chicken, a famous Szechuan dish, made with red and green bell peppers and cooked in a delicious sauce, similar to the one used in the above dish.

Do you prefer beef? The Shredded Beef in Spicy Garlic Ginger Sauce is out of this world! The sauce is really mildly spicy but spicy enough to tell you it's there. And for those vegetarians out there, try the Vegetarian's Delight, a delicious mix of Chinese vegetables, broccoli sautéed in a light rice wine sauce.

Of course, those of you who still prefer the usual Chinese fare will not be turned away! The Ten Ingredient Loin is a mixture of soft Chinese noodles, beef, pork, shrimp and whatever else is needed to make ten ingredients! There is also all the different varieties of fried rice and even a Ten Ingredient fried rice, all of which are delicious.

O.K., now that you know what to get, maybe we should tell you how to get it? If you happen to be downtown at the Harbor, Uncle Lee's is on Lombard St. at South St., across from the new Gallery Mall. This location is quite beautiful and perfect for a nice quiet dinner for two, but of course they can accommodate a party of 15 or so too! The second location is on Greenmount Ave. at 33rd St., a few blocks from Memorial Stadium. This location is not as fancy as the other, it is more your "typical" Chinese restaurant decor (does red velvet and paper lamps come to mind?).

The prices are moderate, ranging from $2.95-$5.95 for appetizers and $6.95-$14.95 for entrees. Dinner for two, with drinks runs approximately $45.00, not too bad for a once in a while occasion. By the way, carry out runs about $1.00 or so cheaper per item, and the downtown location is about $1.00 or so more than the other location for restaurant service. No reservations are necessary and they honor all major credit cards.

Until next week, this is the Green & Grey Gourmet saying "Bon Appetite!"

10,000 Maniacs Mature with In My Tribe

by Jim Choplick
Entertainment Staff Columnist

In 1985 when I heard about a group named 10,000 Maniacs, I immediately thought hardcore. Sounds like a hardcore name, sounds like Millions of Dead Cops. But then I heard they were similar to the Athens-based R.E.M., and that they were "pretty good."

I picked up their first album The Wishing Chair, and the Maniacs were just that, "pretty good." Vocalist Natalie Merchant sounded like a whining Debbie Harry, and the music was nicely textured: acoustic guitar, pedal steel, accordion, organ, percussion; you get the idea. But the debut album suffered from a severe case of sameness. Listening to all 13 tracks was simply boring.

Well, at the very least, In My Tribe earmarks the Maniacs as a band to watch. At the other end of the spectrum, the album is kind of a "something for everybody" type of venture. Not that the band experiments with different genres. No, the Maniacs still have a slight case of sameness (by the next lp, it should be cured), but the Maniacs sound is very accessible, very likeable, also very intelligent and beautiful.

And there certainly isn't anything wrong with that, except that the only people hearing the Maniacs are listeners of WHFS. What's wrong with Top 40, contemporary radio? It doesn't play the real deserving artists, those with integrity.

I think about it. Even though the band lost guitarist John Lombardo, their sound is still very textural, including all types of guitars (mandolin, pedal steel), organs, pianos, percussion up front in the mix and in the back, etc... Add to this Natalie Merchant's maturing vocal ability that has strayed from Harryesque, and now resembles Stevie Nicks and Joan Baez and Natalie Merchant. What Top 40 radio station is going to play a tune that speaks of true artists, rather than big bucks?

Guitarist Robert Buck, Dennis Drew on keyboards, Jerome Augustyniak behind the drumkit, and bassist Steven Gustafson (one question about this guy: Is he related to Joltin' Gustafson, bassist for middle period Roxy Music?) create the beautiful music that pervades this album. All of the tracks were written by the band, except for the single, "Peace Train," an old Cat Stevens tune done justice.

A couple of tracks, such as "Peace Train" and "Like the Weather," open with a very catchy samba beat. Talk about eclecticism! But the beat doesn't overrule the melody (listening Janet Jackson?) and merely acts as a vehicle for the band's mellow, acoustic sound. Probably the most accomplished track is "My Sister Rose," a track co-written by Augustyniak and Merchant. I'm still dreamin' about Buck's lick on this tune. Nice organ, too.

Merchant's eloquent lyrics are very autobiographical, very introspective, but with a view that just about anyone can latch on to: "For a list of vows and a veil of lace made a wife of you today, but you're my sister Rose the same, she sings on 'My Sister Rose.'"

Other excellent lyrical moments occur on "Hey Jack Kerouac," a lament about the late, great author: "You chose your words from months of babes got lost in the wood. Cool junk hooting madmen, street minded girls in Harlem howling at night. What a tear stained shock of the world, you've gone away without saying goodbye."

And continue on "Cherry Tree," a song about an adult illiterate: "Over your shoulder, please don't mind if my eyes have fallen onto your magazine for I've been watching and wondering why your fire is clanging with every line you read. All those lines and circles, to me, a mystery."

Intelligent, textural, beautiful. The 10,000 Maniacs evoke many emotions. Yes, sameness still exists, but to a lesser extent; it is a treat listening to In My Tribe. Can't wait for their next album.

A Gem of an Exhibit

by Florence Hut
Entertainment Staff Writer

If you have not yet seen the Jewelry Show Exhibition at the Walters Art Gallery, it's not too late. The precious gems and jewels that came to Baltimore for public display on May 21, 1987, are in their final week of presentation. The exhibition leaves October 11, 1987.

The sparkling and eye catching jewels range from enameled gold emeralds, pearls, diamonds, amethysts, to more gold and more diamonds. The show involves over 200 pieces of jewelry from past to present time. You must experience the wealth and opulence of the Zucker collection.

Located on 600 North Charles Street, the Walters Art Gallery is open Tuesday through Sunday 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Ample parking is available. For further information, call 547-ARTS.

Photo courtesy of Walters Art Gallery

16th Century Spanish Dolphin Pendant

Reel Stuff

Fatal Attraction

by Kent Miller
Entertainment Staff Reviewer

Michael Douglas' latest movie seems to be more of a statement about adultery rather than a movie telling the story of a man who cheats on his wife. The movie carries the situation to the worst extreme imaginable. And although Fatal Attraction is, for the most part, predictable, it is a very effective and somewhat haunting film.

Douglas is Dan Gallagher, a young successful lawyer and family man. His faith is tested when his wife and daughter are away for a weekend. He, of course, meets Alex Forest, a supposedly good-looking blonde. And Gallagher has very innocent intentions, even when he takes her out for a drink. "Is having dinner a crime?"

"Not yet," is Ms. Forest's flirty reply.

Well, they have a long, hot night together and that's the end of it, at least that's what Gallagher thinks. Not so. Alex starts calling him at home, visiting him at work, and follows him to his house. In this movie, Michael Douglas is given plenty of room to show us what it's like to panic and keep secrets, and he is very convincing as the happily married man afraid of losing it all.

As Alex's obsession increases, she becomes more and more frightening and really weird. Glenn Close is excellent as the psycho-wench that we grow to hate. This is a different role for Close, however, whereas she usually plays the innocent character (Big Chill, The Natural, Jagged Edge). But she brings a lot of tension to the movie and turns it into a very suspenseful thriller.

Fatal Attraction, in a sense, is two movies. The first half is sexy and fresh, but it slows down, almost to boredom, at least until Gallagher begins kidding his affair from his wife. This is Adrian Lyne's third major movie and he seems to be taking better control of the screen than in his other films (Flashdance, 9½ Weeks). He uses very stylish, vivid cinematography in the bedroom and kitchen scenes as well as the fast edited violence scenes.

This is really a very good movie and offers several excellent performances, including Ann Archer as Gallagher's wife. Even though the middle is a bit slow, there is more than enough suspense to make up for it - especially in the end.

Brad also enjoyed this movie. He disagrees about the slow middle, however, and felt that it was a complement to the rest of the film and still as entertaining. Our rating of the films we review is on a scale of 1 to 10. I gave it a 9 and Brad also gave it a 9.

The Big Town

by Brad Troy
Entertainment Staff Reviewer

The Big Town is a fantastic movie about gambling in the 1930s. The movie centers on the experiences of Matt Dillon as a small town crap shooter going big in Chicago. Dillon plays his role with a skill I didn't think he possessed, bringing this film definite strength.

Dillon plays Jack Culley who is persuaded by his smalltown friend Hook to go to Chicago and shoot craps on the circuit. His friend Hook was once big in Chicago and apparently knows talent when he sees it.

The whole situation seems very forboding and negative when Culley arrives in Chicago. Culley's boss, played by Bruce Dern, enis their first encounter by saying, "Save your thanks. Wait 'till you see what comes of it!" Surely this is the introduction to the real conflict of the movie; will Culley be demoralized, seduced and laid to waste by the big city.

Culley plays craps all over town and wins. Then he hears of the "Gem", a small strip joint where the professionals play. He almost breaks the bank and meets George Cole, the owner of the Gem and the movie's antagonist. Not only does Culley meet and beat Cole, he also is gladly seduced by Cole's limbo wife, played by Diane Lane.

Dillon meets with Aggy (Suzy Amis), an unwed mother. Throughout the movie one of the major questions is will Culley end up with the tramp or with the mildly innocent Aggy. Both id the women want him; one wants to use him and the other wants to keep him.

I am not going to disclose any more of the movie except that this movie is definitely a crowd pleaser. Dillon stimulates with the most confident of manners. The film's plot was far from predictable and continued to produce unexpected twist after twist.

Dillon as Jack Culley is cool and confident. He played previously in The Outsiders, Rumblefish and is a veteran of numerous teen films. Diane Lane plays Dillon's seductress and was also in The Outsiders and more recently starred in The Streets of Fire. Tom Skerrit is Culley's "father figure" Hook. Tommy Lee Jones is the sinister George Cole and Suzy Amis, a newcomer to the screen, plays Dillon's innocent on-off girlfriend.

Even though the movie seemed slow to begin, it contained beautifully orchestrated gambling scenes and excellent cinematography. Ben Bolt did an impressive job directing this Martin Ransohoff production.

Without compare, Matt Dillon and Tommy Lee Jones make this movie. Dillon is the essence of confidence and Jones is hateable. I think I liked the movie a little more than Kent did: Kent thought the first third of the movie dragged, but it was saved by Dillon in the city, the gambling sequences and Tommy Lee Jones' performances. We both rated this movie a 7 on a scale of 10.

The Rosary Murders

by Debbie Ruane
Entertainment Staff Reviewer

What if someone in the confessional was to tell a priest that he had poisoned all the wine? Can the priest warn the congregation or does he have to stand by and watch the church community die because of church sanctions?

Donald Sutherland uses this analogy in the motion picture, The Rosary Murders. Sutherland is a well-liked priest who has the unfortunate experience of having the murderer of priests and nuns visit his confessional.

Through this meeting and later murder scenes, Sutherland pinpoints the murderer. The conflict exists because the information expressed in Penance is private and cannot be told to anyone.

Sutherland gives his analogy to a fellow priest and is informed that the purpose of Penance is to, "save souls not lives," but further adds that the priest involved should find a way of spilling the wine.

Another problem lies with the police department. Sutherland is asked to help the police with any information he may have. Sutherland wants to help but is bound by church rulings.

Through a lot of mixed emotions and agony, Sutherland finds the key to the chain of murders without divulging the privacy of Penance.

Sutherland plays the part with complete believability. He has a unique way of expressing inner turmoil without words.

The movie is not a fast paced action packed thriller, but is a rather progressive movie which causes the viewer to reflect on morals and beliefs.

Charles Durning is a talented contrasting character next to Sutherland's. Durning is the hard nose, strict rule-abiding priest who gives no leeway.

A visual contrast between the two is a scene in which the two are talking and Sutherland's collar is unclipped. Not the proper dress for a priest in habit, according to the unrelenting Durning.

The Rosary Murders is an excellent movie to be seen if one is interested in being entertained as well as educated.

People are waiting to hear from you.

In the first year of publication, the Green & Grey was ranked among the top national collegiate newspapers. This year, we want to be even better. We're looking for students to write editorial columns, reviews, and investigative and feature stories. People who have the interest and insight to communicate with our community. The time you invest each week will be seen by 3,000 students, faculty, administrators, and staff members in these pages.

Sports

Former Soccer Star Returns as Assistant Coach

by Kevin Wells
Assistant Sports Editor

Whether you know it or not, the Loyola College soccer team has a member who was a past All-Pro in England, an All-Pro for the Baltimore Blast, and an All-Pro for the now disbanded Seattle Sounders.

His name is Paul Crossley. He is an assistant coach to Bill Sento for the Greyhounds soccer team. He was 17 when he first signed a contract with a pro team in Liverpool. He retired from professional soccer four years ago. "After 20 years of playing my heart out I still want more, but my body said no," said Crossley with his British accent still intact.

Early in his life Crossley set three goals for himself which he hoped to attain before his soccer days were over. "Well basically my goals were to turn pro, play Division I ball, and become an international player" said Crossley. He obtained all three in admirable fashion.

In England he played ten years of "football" in Liverpool and decided he would like to try out the United States. "I thought that in going to the U.S. it would give me a challenge and would sort of make me a pioneer" said Crossley.

When he received a call from the Seattle Sounders of the NASL in the mid-70's to come and play in the United States, he agreed. The striking thing about playing in the United States soccer league is that he would only be receiving a measly $600 a month. "Of course the money was no factor," he said, "I was one of the few other players who wanted to come over just for the challenge." Crossley said.

In the years which he was playing for the Sounders, he still was playing ball in England during the off season. The amount of games a year in which he played reached an incredible 129 games.

1977 was a highlight in the superstar's life. The Sounders beat the Cosmos in the Soccer Bowl. He played against soccer legends, Pele and Franz Beckenbauer in the game. He feels Pele is the best player ever and was a good friend of his the years which they played together.

The talent of Crossley was displayed throughout the whole U.S. in the first ever televised game against the Cosmos. All fans waited for the M.V.P. trophy to go to one of the many superstars on the Cosmos. Little did they know that the assistant coach for Loyola would take that trophy over the likes of Pele and Beckenbauer.

Crossley feels that the biggest problem in U.S. soccer is that it has a serious lacking of talented coaches. "There are many players that have enough quality to play pro but unfortunately there is not enough quality coaches here to support that talent" said Crossley.

He feels that the talent of soccer in the U.S. is increasing, but it will take another ten or fifteen years to match that of Europe. "With more money and promotions, soccer can be bigger in the U.S. but it's still an uphill battle," said Crossley.

Crossley still feels the Greyhounds have a shot at the NCAA's. "We had a dry spell but we hung in there and with patience we still can make the tournament," said an optimistic Crossley.

ECAC METRO STANDINGS
FOR THE WEEK OF SEPT. 21-27

TEAM	ECAC METRO				OVERALL
	W	L	T	GF GA	W	L	T	GF GA
Marist	2	1	0	6 4	4	1	1	10 7
Robert Morris	2	1	0	5 5	7	1	0	31 7
St. Francis (NY)	2	2	0	7 7	3	3	1	10 9
Long Island	1	1	1	6 5	3	3	1	13 15
Monmouth	1	1	0	3 3	3	5	0	10 15
Fairleigh Dickinson	0	1	1	3 4	3	3	1	8 8
Loyola	0	1	0	0 2	4	3	1	18 9

League Standings
SOCCER

	Win	Loss	Tie	Total Pts.
Kicks	0	4	0	0
Team Dogbite	1	1	1	3
No Names	2	0	1	5
Ripsters	2	0	1	5
The Slices	1	1	0	2
Weidenmenn	2	0	1	5
Seven Course Meal	1	0	1	3
Last Place	0	3	0	0
Silver Bullets	2	1	0	5
Independents	0	1	1	1

FUNDAY
COED SOFTBALL

1-5 p.m.
Sunday 10/11
Curley Field
Rosters Due: 10/8
5 men & 5 women
per team (minimum)

ATHLETIC SCHEDULE - WEEK OF OCTOBER 5-11
Soccer:

Oct. 7	Towson State	Curley Field	4 p.m.
Oct. 9	West Virginia	Curley Field	4 p.m.

Field Hockey:

Oct. 8	LaSalle College	Philadelphia, PA	3:30 p.m.
Oct. 10	York College	York, PA	1 p.m.

Volleyball:

Oct. 9	Loyola Tournament	Reitz Arena	5 p.m.
Oct. 10	Loyola Tournament	Reitz Arena	9 a.m.

Women's Tennis:

Oct. 5	UMBC	Butler Courts	3 p.m.
Oct. 8	Hood College	Butler Courts	2 p.m.
Oct. 10 & 11	State Tournament	Mt. St. Mary's	TBA

Cross Country:

Oct. 7	Washington College	Chestertown, MD	3 p.m.
--------	--------------------	-----------------	--------

Managers needed for the Men's and Women's Swimming Teams. Please ask for Coach Tom Murphy at the Pool between 3:00 to 5:30 P.M. Monday through Friday.

Fall 1987 Home Rugby Games
Oct 17 Maryland 12:00
Nov 17 Frostburg St. 12:00
Nov 14 OLD Red 12:00

Persons interested in being managers for the 1987-1988 Men's Lacrosse Program should contact head coach Dave Cottle in the Athletic Department (532-5014).
LACROSSE MANAGERS WANTED

Everywhere he went, Norman ran into a Sovran Bank.

When Norman found out about all the Sovran Bank locations near his new school, he opened a checking account at one. He liked it so much, the next day he went back to open a savings account. He was told there would be no service charge on a balance of $100 or more. And he would earn 5% interest. Norman's still trying to figure out what happens to the other 95%.

Come to our York Road Office at 6378 York Road, Baltimore.

©1987 Sovran Financial Corporation
Sovran Bank, N.A. Sovran Bank/Maryland, Sovran Bank/DC National

Member FDIC

Trip to Annapolis
and
Navy-Air Force Football Game

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1987

$10.00 for football game and bus ticket
$3.00 for just bus ticket

Bus leaves from Millbrook Road at 11:00 A.M.
Bus departs Annapolis at 6:00 P.M.

See an exciting football game or just go to Annapolis to sightsee and shop!

For further information, contact the Office of Student Activities, Student Center E309
323-1010, extension 2713

Pizz-A-Boli's
Free Delivery
Guaranteed In
30 Minutes

PIZZA

We deliver HOT fresh dough pizza with real cheese and only the freshest toppings.

	12"	16"
Cheese	$4.95	$ 7.50
1-Item	$5.90	$ 8.70
2-Items	$6.80	$ 9.80
3-Items	$7.70	$10.80
4-Items	$8.25	$11.80
The Meal Buster™	$9.25	$12.80

FAMOUS
STROMBOLI

Our secret sauce, ground beef and 100% real cheese wrapped in our fresh dough. Additional items extra.

Stromboli

Reg.	$3.95
1-Item	$4.40
2-Items	$4.80
3-Items	$5.25

$3.00 Off your order if it does not arrive within 30 minutes. Manager's approval needed.

CALL 323-FAST NOW!
323-3278

$2.00 OFF

Any Large Pizza
With 2 or More
Toppings

1 Coupon Per Pizza
Good Now Thru 10/26/87
Not valid with any other offers

$1.00 OFF

Any Pizza
With 1 or More
Toppings

1 Coupon Per Pizza
Good Now Thru 10/26/87
Not valid with any other offers

Paterakis Scores Twice in Victory Over American University

by Stacey Tiedge
Sports Editor

The undefeated Loyola field hockey team continued their winning streak last Wednesday as they beat American University 2-1 in overtime. American U. is 2-6 for the season.

Karen Paterakis scored both goals for the Lady Greyhounds. Paterakis' first score came with five minutes left in the first half. The goal was smoothly netted after a goal-front scramble. The rest of the game was a surprising struggle for Loyola who had difficulty scoring against the clearly out-matched American U. team.

It looked as though it was going to be a 1-0 game as the second half wound down into its last minutes. But with 3:46 left on the clock, American U.'s Megan Burns slipped a shot in under goalie, Susan Heather, who was diving for the save. And suddenly, with three minutes left in the game the pressure was on.

Regulation play ended scoreless as did the first ten minute half of overtime. Loyola's game-winning second goal came off the stick of Paterakis with six minutes left in the second half of overtime. About the goal, Paterakis said, "It came off a long hit. Mitch (McDermott) hit a diagonal to the center. I cut from the left post to the right post and put it in the left side."

Goalie Heather totalled 11 saves in the game, including an impressive side-tackle as part of Loyola's overtime defensive tactics. Sophomore defender, Jennifer Uehla said about Heather, "Sue saved the game." Team tri-captain Mary Hart added, "It just goes to show you how we work as a team. No one person really stands out, but Sue had a great game."

In general, both the team and the Head Coach Sandy Campanaro were disappointed with Loyola's level of play. Paterakis said, "We were playing a waiting game. We were giving (American U.) chances to get the ball."

Campanaro said, "We were flat. We were one step behind today." Regarding plans to maintain Loyola's winning streak Campanaro said, "We'll use whatever we did wrong today and work on that in practice."

Mitch McDermott assisted on a goal against American University.

Rugby Team Kicks Off Strong

By George Sarno
Sports Staff Writer

Men's rugby at Loyola is a popular club sport that has steadily been growing with interest and intrigue. Rugby, the tough-man's sport, looks like an unusual football game at first glance. But the rules are different on many counts. One similarity, though, is that players make good use of their medical kits. Injuries are not at all uncommon. Physical contact is intense and body pads are non-existent.

Loyola rugby holds the top ranking in the Potomac Rugby Union and they are looking to "repeat last year... and then some" said coach Mike Flanagan. Last year overall, the "A" side of competition was 18-4 while the "B" side finished with an impressive undefeated season. Rugby is not currently recognized by the NCAA but the schedule is demanding and not to be taken lightly. The year began with a victory over Lehigh. The season is highlighted by contests with George Mason, the Naval Academy and Maryland. Of these three, Maryland is believed to be their toughest rivalry. Loyola will face Maryland Oct. 17 at home. Loyola was credited with a victory over Bucknell on 9/26/87 and is looking forward to their match against George Mason on Oct. 3 at home. When asked how Loyola would fare against George Mason, Matt Malcotti replied "I think we will win. They are good but so are we. We have thirteen of fifteen "A" side players returning this year."

Tom Smith off to a good start.

Malcotti dislocated his shoulder in an intra-squad scrimmage and is anxious to return soon. Year round preparation and "hard nosed players" make up a good squad said Malcotti.

Kevin Kahoe, a senior in his fourth year of rugby at Loyola agreed that "hard work and dedication" are a must.

The club sport of rugby is tough and exciting for the players. Though the sport is not recognized by the NCAA, many feel that it should be. The competition does not lack any intensity that top NCAA contests might have. Chris Carroll said, "Competition is just as important as the NCAA. You have to be pumped. We are in a union and it is just as important for us to win."

When coach Mike Flanagan was questioned how he wanted Loyola rugby to be remembered, he answered without hesitation, "Our guys are a fine bunch who train hard, work hard, and are quality athletes. They are committed to the game and to the club. We hope this is the beginning of a long, productive Loyola College rugby future."

Hamwright Spends Summer in Med School

by Jodi Lombardo
Sports Staff Writer

Sophomore basketball player, Marcus Hamwright went south this past summer to spend his time off from college and basketball going to college and playing basketball.

Hamwright, who's interested in pursuing a career in orthopedic surgery or sports medicine, spent the summer attending a bio-medical program for superior college sophomores and juniors sponsored by the Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee.

Meharry accepted students into their program based upon students' academic performance, recommendations, and the quality of an applicant-written essay. Hamwright, who learned about Meharry's program through Sister Helen Christensen of Loyola's math department, said about his decision to apply to the program, "I knew I was interested in medicine, but I needed encouragement. I needed to know if I could really do it. Now I know I can."

Meharry's program, which ran from June 6 to July 31, offered classes which included immunology, chemistry, statistics, organic chemistry, pharmacology, analytical geometry, and calculus. The 32 students accepted into the program spent eight hours a day attending classes and labs. Hamwright said, "It was eight weeks of hard studying."

Hamwright spent his Friday evenings working in an emergency room and his Saturdays making rounds with a doctor. Hamwright gained experience working with EKG's and IV's.

Hamwright said that to escape the monotony of classes, he would spend the free part of his weekends playing basketball for a summer league. Hamwright, who played point guard and averaged 32 points a game, said that it took a lot of determination and the energy to keep going on a small amount of sleep in order to balance his basketball and his class work.

Between the Lines

Chuck Acquisto

Looking at Loyola's sports program there is one thing lacking. Women's sports. Don't get me wrong, they do exist. It is just they may as well not with the amount of support they get from the Loyola community.

While women's sports in the United States continue to grow in numbers and popularity, it continues to be an enigma here at Loyola. And while the NCAA is increasing its support of women's athletics, Loyola's Athletic Office and community does enough to get by NCAA regulations.

Now I am not Alan Alda. And I am not for giving them more funding. I am for giving women's sports more support, fan support. Why not? Since the athletic office has to pay for these sports, why not support them?

The biggest let down may be women's basketball. Now the women's team had a very disappointing season last year, but still the support they received didn't help. Now most women's sports, unless highly successful, will never draw the crowds of men's sports. Therein lies the answer. Schedule women's sports contests and games before the men's.

Under this system of scheduling, women's sports would be able to at least attract decent crowds for the latter part of their games. This has proven quite effective at the high school and collegiate levels. Crowds start drifting in for the men's games and manage to catch the end of the women's games.

One specific example is the University of Maryland Baltimore County. Many of their women's basketball games are scheduled right before men's games. Crowds who managed to catch pieces of their games began to come earlier and earlier to the women's games. One game at U.M.B.C. drew a larger crowd than all of the crowds at Loyola's home games.

Basketball is not the only sport that can benefit from this set-up. Women's soccer and lacrosse are two others in need of filled bleachers and cheering fans.

You can ask almost anyone and they will tell you that half the key to success is some support. Loyola's women sports are looking for that support.

Athlete of the Week

Gina Iarocci

The Green and Grey has picked Gina Iarocci, a freshman volleyball starter as Athlete of the Week. Gina, who has played volleyball since she was in the seventh grade, says that college volleyball is a big change and lots of fun. She played varsity level volleyball in high school, but admitted that most of her experience came from an outside team called the Capital Volleyball Club. As a member of this club's volleyball team, Gina competed against several volleyball teams out of the Washington Metropolitan Area. Her success led her to travel and play against east coast teams, and participate in the Volleyball Junior Olympics.

Gina is the sole starting freshman for Loyola's Volleyball Team who plays entire matches. She's a setter/hitter and one of only three setters on the team. This part of her position enables her to control the action and deceive the block on the other side. "You have to be smart and think about each move. Volleyball is not just a game of muscularity and endurance, but of thinking and smart maneuvering."

Gina recalled the Towson State Tourney when Loyola played rival, Navy. This game was the most exciting for Gina because Navy was highly ranked in Division Two and Loyola dominated the second game 15-12. Loyola struggled against Navy but unfortunately the match ended in defeat.

Volleyball Setter

Gina, who is on scholarship for volleyball, plans on a successful four year career. Unfortunately, the beginning of this season has caused some disappointment, but Gina's hopes are high for the upcoming matches: "With a record of 2-7, we know we have the talent but we are just not clicking. One of these days, though, we know it will all come together."

Gina enjoys playing for Loyola's Volleyball Team and receives support from all the players: "Even my teammates who sit on the bench, push and support the starters."

The women's volleyball team has had a difficult start with a 2-7 record, but has a chance to pull it together in the Loyola Tournament on Friday, October 9 and Saturday, October 10. Gina will definitely play an important role in this upcoming tournament because as coach Diane Aikens says: "Gina is one of the best all around players Loyola has ever seen. She is a high intensity player who has very good leadership qualities."

G & G Photo/James LaScala

